Disasters are increasing and, predicted to get worse.

Emergencies and natural disasters are increasing in frequency and intensity. As one of Canada's largest humanitarian organizations, the Canadian Red Cross is on the ground to respond and is needed more than ever. More people need temporary accommodation, food, and other support to begin to rebuild their lives after emergencies. From floods to housefires – we are often first on the scene and last to leave. We rely on the generosity of donors to help us empower communities and people as they recover and rebuild after an emergency or disaster.

You can provide for loved ones and still leave a meaningful gift. Please contact us to learn how you can make an impact with a gift in your Will.

“ We know it will make an impact on a global level. ”

— Sharon Mohip

In 2017, Sharon Mohip’s mother, Parbattee, was diagnosed with stage four metastatic lung cancer and became a patient at The Princess Margaret. Sharon had been a long-time participant in The Weekend to Conquer Cancer, and now her reasons for fundraising hit home. Sadly, Parbattee passed away in 2019, but Sharon is continuing on her quest to help end cancer with a gift in her will to honour her mother.

Reduce suffering from cancer for generations to come by leaving a gift to The Princess Margaret Cancer Foundation in your will. To learn more, contact Jill Nelson at 416-738-7329, email jill.nelson@thepmcf.ca, or visit thepmcf.ca

Dear Colleague:

On behalf of the Canadian Bar Association, we congratulate the publisher of the Canadian Donor's Guide on this thirty-eighth edition of the publication. The Canadian Donor's Guide continues to be a useful service for our members and for the many worthy charities seeking contributions.

Once again, the Canadian Donor's Guide is being provided free of charge to lawyers and notaries who are members of the Canadian Bar Association's Wills, Estates & Trusts Section, Charities and Not-for-Profit Law Section, Taxation Law Section and the Small, Solo and General Practice Section.

We are sure you will agree that the Canadian Donor's Guide is a useful source of information for your practice. It provides clients with up-to-date information and insight about a variety of worthwhile causes to support. It is also an important resource for you to refer to when assisting clients in your practice area.

Please note that the publisher of the Canadian Donor's Guide does not certify that all charities featured in the Guide are duly registered with the Canada Revenue Agency. You are therefore advised to verify charitable status with the Canada Revenue Agency as you deem appropriate.

We hope you will enjoy this year's guide.

Sincerely,

Chère collègue,
Cher collègue,

Au nom de l'Association du Barreau canadien, nous félicitons l'éditeur du Guide des donateurs aux organismes de charité du Canada pour son ce trente-huitième édition, que nos membres et les organismes de charité sollicitant des dons continuent de trouver très utile.

Une fois de plus, nous offrons ce Guide gratuitement aux juristes et notaires, membres de la Section des testaments, successions et fiducies, de la Section des organismes de bienfaisance et à but non lucratif, de la Section du droit fiscal et du Forum des juristes exerçant en petits cabinets, seuls ou en pratique générale, de l'Association du Barreau canadien.

Nous sommes convaincus que ce Guide sera une excellente source de renseignements pour votre cabinet. Il procure des renseignements à jour et un aperçu d'une vaste gamme de causes dignes d'intérêt que vos clients peuvent choisir d'appuyer. Il fournit également une importante ressource que vous pouvez consulter lorsque vous aidez des clients dans votre pratique.

Veuillez noter que l'éditeur du Guide des donateurs aux organismes de charité du Canada ne certifie pas que tous les organismes de bienfaisance inscrits dans le Guide sont dûment enregistrés auprès de l'Agence du revenu du Canada. Nous vous conseillons de vérifier le statut d'organisme de bienfaisance auprès de l'Agence du revenu du Canada, le cas échéant.

Nous espérons que vous apprécierez le guide de cette année.

Nous vous prions d'agréer, chère collègue, cher collègue, l'expression de nos sentiments les meilleurs.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Planning Your Legacy

Welcome to the 38th edition of the Canadian Donor's Guide – your authoritative annual directory of fundraising organizations in Canada. Once again, I appreciate the opportunity to provide you with this comprehensive reference resource and related editorial content to assist with your respective responsibilities in the planned giving environment.

Delivering more than 17,000 copies of our publication to key decision makers and professional advisors in Canada's donor community every year is not possible without the relationships the Canadian Donor's Guide shares with the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP), the Canadian Bar Association, STEP Canada and Imagine Canada. We are so very thankful for their support for and their commitment to our efforts. In addition, we could not provide this Guide without the many charitable organizations across Canada who put their trust in us to bring their messages to their key audience – those charities who purchase advertising.

Since our last edition we have seen the continuation of the war in Ukraine, learned of continued challenges for Indigenous peoples and people of colour and witnessed destructive wildfires and other natural disasters across Canada and in other parts of the world. Some of our contributed articles share information on these topics.

Paul Nazareth writes about making your giving more about “donating as an act of hope....be generous in your heart” and do it by continuing to be tax smart, too. Paul also speaks of a journey many Canadians are on now – one of personal reconciliation – and thereby “looking to support Indigenous communities and causes in both urban centres, Indigenous communities and many northern nations...” You'll want to check out the “whys” that Paul mentions near the end of his article.

Paul also refers to Will Power – a Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) initiative. We are thrilled to share some of Will Power's information again in the inner pages of this Guide and to include an article from them. We believe in their campaign to make gifts in Wills the norm for Canadians. As their article states “...shape the legacy you want...support your family and support your cause.”

A similar theme is brought to us by the Canada Life Par Gifts program that was introduced earlier this year. Andrea Frossard and Vickram Malik tell us about creating this program to break down barriers for donors to use insurance in their planned giving. This Par Gifts program supports planned giving by making it easier for the donor and more beneficial for charities.

Thanks once again go to Adam Aptowitz for providing us with his masterful updates to detailed tax considerations.

Malcolm Burrows returns with some information on gifts of real estate and includes some great questions to review

Alison Stoneman
Publisher, Canadian Donor's Guide

if this is something you are considering. Malcolm says there is a “cost and responsibility associated with big dreams and special properties.”

We receive some advice from Ian Hull and Geoffrey Sculthorpe about what might happen when a beneficiary dies before the deceased. In another article, Jonathan Pellow shares some information about the Cy-Près Doctrine that can be applied when a gift in a Will is meant for a charity that no longer exists. This doctrine can have estate trustees attempt to find a charity with a similar purpose as the intended charity in order to “save the gift.” Mark Halpern of WEALTHinsurance.com brings us some information about the proposed changes to the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) due to come into effect on January 1, 2024. Mark shares his thoughts on how this may “have a dampening effect on high-net-worth individuals’ giving intentions.” Adam Aptowitz also included information in his article about the AMT.

And, further on the topic of high-net-worth individuals, freelance journalist Angela Long bring us an interesting article about wealthy next-gen donors. She explores their desire to “transform the philanthropic sector towards rehabilitation rather than charity.” Angela shares that conversations are happening about systemic change, racial justice, asking difficult questions, challenging infrastructure and moving from donor-centric to community-centric ways and about social justice giving.

Betty-Anne Howard is a new contributor to our Guide who brings us her thoughts on Women and Philanthropy. Betty-Anne says that “we courageously set out to make a difference in our world and the lives of others” but it is often difficult for women to consider estate planning, pointing out that the language used in the “financial world can be intimidating.” She talks about the conversations needed to make estate planning more accessible, understandable, and “full of the kind of love, language, and leadership that will make a difference in the future.”

You will find an article in both French and English submitted by our treasured friend, Natasha van Bentum, about the Ecological Gifts Program of the Government of Canada. Natasha presents clear information about this program that may be of interest if you are considering a gift of this type.

WWF-Canada’s Emily Giles brings us Wildfires, Wildlife and What We Can Do. Emily speaks about how climate change is altering our world and creating conditions that risk more frequent, more severe wildfires as we have seen this year. Emily also informs us that some fires are “a natural part of nature and ecosystem processes.” Any wildfires can affect the plants and wildlife that must adapt or move with varied success. Emily also shares that WWF-Canada is supporting the efforts of the Secwepemcū’ecw Restoration and Stewardship Society (SRSS). The SRSS is planting a greater diversity of trees at the site of Elephant Hill -- which was the site of one of British Columbia’s worst wildfires -- to encourage reforestation. In closing, Emily states that -- as we look to provide protection and management to our forests -- we need to do so “alongside Indigenous communities, who have been stewarding land and waters in their territories for thousands of years.”

Please have a read of the article by Sharon Lee from the Canadian Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation, who gives recognition to caregivers -- the “unsung heroes” of our healthcare system. The impact of caregivers is immense and Sharon believes they should be “our responsibility to acknowledge, support, and equip.” A heartwarming story from United Way British Columbia brings us information about a safe, supportive community for those who were previously homeless. The article explains that the program, which includes a home, meals, support, physical and mental health assistance as well as art and gardening programs, provides hope to these people. Photographs are taken of residents upon admission and then after they have been in residence for three months. The difference is incredible and you could hardly recognize that the photos were of the same person. In their community “Everyone has a voice. Everyone has a story. Everyone matters.”

Paul B. Wolfe of the Canadian Centre For Christian Charities provides us with a very good look at using Artificial Intelligence (AI). Paul shares their journey using AI within their organization and leaves us with some great tips and prompts and experiments to try at your place of work. And yes, he did use AI to assist with writing the article – but you will have to read it yourself to get the details.

Thank you again for your dedicated support of the Canadian Donor’s Guide as a valued resource. If you have any questions, suggestions or enhancements, feel free to contact me directly. May the Guide always be helpful in your endeavours to easily and effectively match donors with charities.

I wish you all nothing but the best of success in the year ahead as we continue to navigate through these waters emerging from recent troubling seas with resilience, grace and kindness. Be well.

GIFT PLANNING

How to Make Your Donations More Meaningful

It's a continued joy hearing back each year from estate planners across Canada, confirming how valuable a resource this Donors' Guide has been for them, their clients, and communities. Having been connected to the work of this publication for well over 20 years, I hear those stories and incorporate them into the courses we host at the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) to further educate both charities and advisors in tax, financial, estate and charitable gift planning.

Can I take you behind the curtain of the charity sector for a second?

Giving research tells us that most Canadians donate because they were asked, because of fundraising. Our heads and hearts matter, but on their own they rarely result in a gift that feels good, and you know it's doing good. Canadians are often surprised to learn this about themselves. I've seen it firsthand many times in my extensive work helping new and recurring donors alike establish their own giving plans. More and more advisors are working with clients on giving plans to 'flip the script' to switch from giving as a reaction to donating as an act of hope. They are building pre-emptive safeguards against the world's problems instead of responding to them when, all too often, it's already too late. Giving plans move beyond merely comforting the suffering and allow Canadians to invest in solving problems at their roots.

And right now, Canadians are ready to step up and give, even in uncertain times. Because they care.

More Canadians than ever are on a journey of personal reconciliation and are looking to support Indigenous communities and causes in both urban centers, Indigenous communities and the many northern nations that haven't engaged in traditional settler-created 'philanthropy'. As we all react to the climate crisis and our own communities are affected by fires, floods and crisis, disaster donations will become a more common giving theme. Our nation has a deep and beautiful history to be told in the arts, science, technology and more. The generation that built our modern Canada — that invested a lifetime in their careers and communities and know our rich culture and history firsthand — are transitioning into retirement and beyond. They know better than most the danger of losing our stories and the importance of protecting our legacies.

In 2023 alone, fundraising has already been responsible for Billions (capital "B") of dollars in donations. By using this guide and an educated advisor planning your giving could make those numbers much higher. At the same time, hundreds of sophisticated charities representing huge societal challenges are having to adapt their strategic fundraising due to increasingly insufficient funding and policy at all levels of Government. These opportunities and challenges are exactly why so many advisors are turning to gift planning as an option for their clients; not only during their lifetimes using incentives to donate stocks, insurance, and to advised-foundations but of course strategic donations allocated in Wills and estate plans. To that end, you'll find in this guide an up-to-date and comprehensive listing of charities as a resource to explore causes and opportunities to give back meaningfully and strategically. You'll also find a simple and streamlined overview of the many tax benefits to giving and strategies for tax-smart giving to maximize the impact of your planned donations. Thanks to Canada's highly advanced charitable giving rules, you can have your pick of short and long-term giving solutions.

So come discover local organizations and small charities doing amazing work in your own community. Revisit your tax receipts and see how adding planned giving to your budget or your estate plan can let you give more with less going to taxes. And start considering the "whys" — why you want to help, why you've chosen one organization over another, and why the legacy you leave behind matters to you.

CHARITABLE DONATIONS

A Summary of Tax Considerations

INTRODUCTION

It is a peculiar result of history that regulation of charities in Canada is part of the Income Tax Act (ITA). One of the unintended consequences of this placement is that the regulation of charities fits primarily within an income tax context. So, donations are incentivized using income tax mechanisms and sanction against charities is framed as the revocation of the special status that provides charities with their umbrella of privileges. This means that both charities and their supporters cannot fully understand their options for supporting a particular charitable aim without understanding the incentives of donating to charity and the limitations in charitable operations.

QUALIFIED DONEES

It bears mentioning that government has extended the benefits given to charities to certain other entities known as qualified donees. They include:

- Registered Canadian amateur athletic associations;
- Certain organizations that provide low cost housing for the aged;
- Most municipalities;
- Certain municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada;
- Registered national arts service organizations;

- Certain foreign charities that have received a gift from the federal government;
- The federal and provincial governments;
- The United Nations and its agencies; and,
- Registered journalism organizations.

INCENTIVES

As the incentives for donating are primarily tax-based, one should have a basic understanding of the tax system to appreciate the value of the inducement. There are two fundamental aspects of Canada's tax system to keep in mind. The first is that Canadians are taxed progressively. That is, the first chunk of income (a bracket) is taxed at a low percentage, the next chunk at a higher rate and so on. The second rule to understand is that – after a Canadian adds up their entire income – there are certain subtractions that are made that reduce the total amount of tax that is paid to the government.

Those that are made prior to the application of the tax rate are called deductions; those that are made after are called credits.

Tax donations are treated as either donations or credits depending upon who makes the donation. If the donations are made by corporations, the donor entity can deduct the amount of the donation from its income prior to the application of the appropriate tax rate(s) to its income bracket(s). On the other hand, when donations are made by individuals, the amount of the donation is multiplied by the appropriate federal percentage and deducted from federal tax and the same procedure is conducted in each province at their rates. The product of these calculations is then deducted from the tax owing.

Adam Aptowitzer

The tax credit itself is determined by multiplying the first $200 by the lowest combined federal/provincial rate in the appropriate province (except Alberta) and multiplying everything over $200 by the designated rate (in most Canadian jurisdictions the highest provincial rate). The table on the next page (Table A, page 12) illustrates the tax credits available for donations of $1,200 in the different provinces.

As most Canadians are not subject to Alternative Minimum Tax, the discussion below assumes the more typical taxing situation. And, to simplify the discussion, we will make two assumptions. First, unless otherwise stated, the donor holds the items to be donated as capital property. Second, we will assume a credit rate of 46 per cent.

DONATIONS OF CASH

Donations of cash are straightforward. The charity simply receipts the face value of the amount donated. (This does not apply to currency held for collection purposes). Depending on the province and the donor's tax bracket, the tax credits generated from the donation would offset the tax owing on the income earned, so no tax would be payable on the money earned and then donated. At lower income brackets, and in Alberta, the credits would actually be more than offset by the tax owing and the donor would be able to shelter other income from tax with the credits earned from this donation. If the donor is donating cash that is not income to them in the year donating, the credit could be used to offset taxes owing from other sources. But, in those provinces where the tax rate is higher than the credit rate on donations, the donor could still be paying tax on a dollar given to charity!

PUBLIC SECURITIES

Canada levies tax on 50 per cent of the appreciation in value of a capital good. The tax is levied when the item is disposed of (i.e. sold, given away, or donated).

However, the ITA does contain an exemption for publicly listed securities (on certain exchanges) donated to charity.

Moreover, the donor continues to receive a donation tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the shares donated. Thus, there is no tax on the donation, but the donor still receives a tax credit equal to the fair market value of the donation.

While shares of publicly traded corporations are the most popular form of security to be donated to charity, there are a variety of other sophisticated financial securities that may also be donated.

Examples include exchange-traded funds, index funds, hedge funds, warrants, rights, and put and call options. If these products qualify as publicly traded securities, they will qualify for the special tax treatment accorded donations of this type.

Example:

Assume that Kirk lives in Ontario and buys one share of a high-tech company for one dollar ($1). Over time, the share rises in value and may even split once or more than once. After ten years, with all splits factored in, Kirk owns shares worth a total of $100. If Kirk were to sell the share, he would have a capital gain of $99 (i.e. the fair market value of $100, less the cost of $1). Applying the capital gains inclusion rate of 50%, only $47.50 would be taxable. Further applying a tax rate of 46%, the amount of tax payable would be $21.85. Thus, if Kirk sells the shares, he is left with after-tax income of $78.15 (i.e. $100 - $21.85).

Conversely, let's say Kirk decides he wants to donate his shares instead of selling them. In this case, Kirk has no tax to pay and, of course, receives no income from the sale of the share. He does however receive a tax receipt for $100, which will offset $46 of taxes due from other sources. So, assuming Kirk is paying tax on income from other sources, the actual after-tax cost of this donation is $54.

FLOW-THROUGH SHARES

For income tax purposes, the cost of such a share is deemed to be zero. So, even if the buyer buys the share at $10.00 and sells it at $8.00, the share is still assumed to have gained $8.00 in value and is therefore taxed on an $8.00 capital gain even though it actually lost $2.00. (Don't worry about the shareholder though; ownership of the share gave them access to a deduction making it worthwhile). Flow-through shares are like any other asset and can be donated to charity. When these shares are publicly traded, there is no tax on the capital gain. However, for purposes of donation, the law considers the amount of the purchase price to be a capital gain and only the amount in excess of that (if there is any) to be eligible for the capital gains exemption.

STOCK OPTIONS

An employee who exercises a stock option (i.e. buys it at less than fair market value) receives a benefit equal to the difference between the purchase price (and any amounts they may have paid for the option) and the fair market value at the time of purchase. Tax is calculated based on the amount of this benefit. In certain circumstances, the employee can claim a deduction against the stock option benefit so only 50% of the benefit is taxable. If an employee stock option is exercised and marketable securities are donated within 30 days after the option is exercised, and if certain other conditions are met, only 25% of the benefit is taxable.

Individuals who make qualifying donations of marketable securities acquired through such stock options are not required to report any of the benefit. And, if the shares are traded on a public exchange, then their donation is treated as the donation of other publicly listed shares as described previously.

PRIVATE SECURITIES

The donation of securities of private corporations is dealt with in one of two ways; either the gifts are “excepted” or they are not. An excepted gift is a share donated to a charitable organization or public foundation where the donor deals at arm’s length with the charity’s directors/trustees, officers and other like officials. In these circumstances the gift is treated as any other gift of capital in which there is no special tax treatment for the donation (i.e. the donor pays tax on the disposition).

In cases where the gift has been donated to a private foundation or to a public charity to which the donor is related, the gift is not considered “made” until one of two things happen: either the item donated must cease to be a non-qualifying security (e.g. the corporation is no longer controlled by the donor or the corporation becomes publicly listed) or the charity has disposed of the security within five years of receiving the donation. The fair market value of the gift is then the lesser of:

- the value of the security when transferred to the charity,
- and the value of the security when the gift is deemed to have been made.

Note that the donor does not have to include any capital gain in their income before the shares are sold by the charity, so that the donor is not paying tax in advance of receiving the receipt. If the charity does not sell the shares within five years, the donor will not receive a receipt and the gain will never be taxable.

RRSPs/RRIFs

People may find that they have more than enough money in their RRSPs once they get to a certain age and are willing to make donations in their lifetime to see the fruits of those donations while they are still alive. The RRSP rules do allow for withdrawals from the plan but, upon withdrawal, the institution that holds the account (usually a bank) is required to withhold certain amounts. These amounts on a per withdrawal basis (i.e., not cumulatively for the year) are:

- 10% (5% in Québec) on withdrawals up to $5,000;
- 20% (10% in Québec) on withdrawals between $5,001 and $15,000; and,
- 30% (15% in Québec) on withdrawals of more than $15,000.

The amounts withdrawn are claimed as income to the owner of the RRSP in the year withdrawn and tax is paid at the owner’s marginal rate. Thus, if a potential donor wants to donate $50,000 and has that money in his or her RRSP, a withdrawal of $50,000 would give the potential donor outside of Québec $35,000 cash to donate. The remaining 30 per cent ($15,000 in this case) would be remitted to the government by the bank and credited as income tax already paid when the donor files his or her tax return for that year.

A donor may also wish to donate his or her RRSP or RRIF upon death. There are two ways to do this. One way is to list the charity as a beneficiary of the RRSP in the donor’s Will. The other way is to make use of the direct beneficiary election, which is signed when the RRSP is first opened (and can usually be changed at will). If the first method is used, the RRSP will fall into the donor’s general estate before passing on to the charity. Under the second method, the RRSP will automatically become the property of the charity without going through the estate.

The advantage of using the RRSP direct beneficiary election is that the RRSP will not pass through probate. When a Will is probated, the various provinces charge different amounts of tax on the total value of assets passed on in the Will. Thus, the amount of money in an RRSP is added to the other assets and a portion is taken by the government before any of the assets are passed on.

INSURANCE

Sometimes an insurance policy becomes superfluous. If the policy is unnecessary, the donor may decide to donate it to charity.

From a tax perspective, the donor of a life insurance policy will have an income inclusion of the proceeds of disposition less the adjusted cost base (ACB). An income inclusion is distinct from a capital gain and effectively means that a donation of an insurance policy has no net tax benefit for the donor. The ACB calculation is rather complicated and considers the premiums paid, dividends received, and – for policies purchased after 1982 – the Net Cost of Pure Insurance (NCPI). Despite the ominous name, the NCPI is not overly difficult to calculate, although it will likely require professional advice from either an experienced advisor or the insurance company involved.

In a February 2008 bulletin— and later in another setting — the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) laid down certain guidelines for determining the Fair Market Value of a disposed-of policy. In these pronouncements, the calculation of the proceeds of disposition (POD) of an insurance policy considers:

- the policy’s loan value;
- the face value of the policy;
- the state of health of the insured and their life expectancy;
- conversion privileges;
- other policy terms, such as term riders, double indemnity provisions; and,
- replacement value.

The idea here is that the value of a policy may or may not be accurately reflected by any cash surrender value held by the policy. When valuing the policy for both tax and receipting purposes, the donor and the charity must take into account the fact that the donor may be very ill and the policy may mature shortly after donation. A policy that would otherwise be impossible to receipt would become valuable to the donor. To do this, the advice of an actuary and an appraiser is critical to correctly valuing the policy.

The charity may either cash the policy and use the funds immediately or pay the premiums on the policy and collect the larger death benefit when the insured dies. Of course, a very generous donor may not only donate the policy to the charity but also donate the yearly premiums to the charity. In this case, both the donation of the policy and the donated premiums would be receiptable.

ANNUITIES

An annuity is a contract under which one person deposits a sum of money with another in exchange for a subsequent income. It is basically the reverse concept of insurance.

The income may be paid for either a specified period, for life, or for life with a minimum guaranteed period. Under the latter method, if the purchaser of the annuity dies during the guaranteed period, the annuity will be paid to some other person whom the purchaser had designated to receive it.

Although annuities are normally purchased from insurance companies or trust companies, life annuities are sometimes purchased from charities. Essentially, a person gives the charity a sum of money irrevocably in exchange for a promise by the charity to pay the donor a monthly income for life. The funds received would then be invested by the charity at a higher rate than it would pay to the donor.

For annuities issued after December 21, 2002, the donor would be eligible to receive a receipt for an amount equal to the excess of the amount contributed by the donor over the amount that would be paid at that time to an arm's-length third party to acquire an annuity to fund the guaranteed payments.

CANADIAN CULTURAL PROPERTY

The Government of Canada has set up the Canadian Cultural Property Export Review Board to certify which artwork or other item has cultural significance to Canadians. This not only applies to works with a Canadian aspect, but it also applies to any cultural work that Canada may want to keep within its borders. If the donation is certified and made to a designated institution, there is no tax due on the disposition. Thus, if the charity is hoping to attract donations of property with a particular cultural significance, it is important to secure the designation.

There are two categories of designation:

- Category A is granted for an indefinite period to institutions that are well-established and meet all of the criteria related to certain legal, curatorial and environmental requirements.
- Category B is granted in relation to an institution involved in the proposed acquisition of an object (or collection) that does not meet all of the criteria for designation, but which has demonstrated its capability to effectively preserve the type of property in question. More information on the designation is available from the Department of Canadian Heritage on its website at <https://www.canada.ca/en/canadian-heritage/services/funding/movable-cultural-property/designated-organizations.html>

The criteria by which the review board makes its decisions is beyond the scope of this article, but the board has published a guide on the subject available here: <https://www.canada.ca/content/dam/pch/documents/services/movable-cultural-property/certif-guide-eng.pdf>.

As a proper certification may involve many months of research, a request for certification should be made well before the donation is contemplated.

If a taxpayer donates certified property to a designated institution, there will not be any tax owing on the gift. In addition, the taxpayer is entitled to a tax receipt for 100% of the value of the gift (as determined by the review board).

INVENTORY

The determination of whether an item is inventory or capital is one of the most fundamental areas of our income tax system, but nevertheless is shrouded in vagueness and controversy. For example, to most people a house is a capital property. But if the owner of the home is engaged in the business of buying and selling homes, the property becomes inventory of a business. There is a different tax treatment on the disposition of inventory as 100% of the value is included in income (as opposed to capital, of which only 50% is included).

Nonetheless, the donation of inventory will result in tax credits that will at least offset the tax due on the disposition of the inventory.

Example:

Spock runs a bakery. His business is not incorporated, so all of the income of the business is taxed at his personal rates during the year.

After Spock has deducted all of his expenses, he is left with taxable income in the year of $50,000. If Spock sells one more cake that is worth $100, he will pay tax on that cake of $31. However, upon donating the cake, he will be entitled to tax credits of approximately $40 (assuming that he has already made at least $200 worth of donations). Spock can then offset the tax owed by disposing of the last cake and using the additional $9 against the tax owing on his other $50,000 of income.

Of course, as income grows, so too does the tax rate, meaning that there are fewer leftover credits. In those provinces where the tax is equal to or greater than the credits generated by donation (which is all provinces except Alberta), there would be no additional tax credits left over for use. In Alberta however, the credits will always more than offset the tax on the disposition of the donated item, even at the highest brackets. Given the number of provinces, the multiplicity of tax rates and brackets, and the frequency with which they change, an accountant should be retained to calculate the results of any donation of inventory.

PERSONAL USE PROPERTY

Personal Use Property (PUP) is property that is owned by the taxpayer and that is primarily for the personal use and enjoyment of the taxpayer or persons related to the taxpayer.

PUP includes:

- Bottles of wine

- Loyalty points programs
- Air Miles
- Shoppers Optimum points
- Religious items
- Gift certificates
- Clothes
- Artwork
- Hobby items
- Comic books
- Model trains
- Toys
- Land (e.g. a fishing hole)
- Books

Normally, when these types of items are donated to a charity, the charity does not issue a receipt, nor does the owner expect one. This is, in most cases, the appropriate treatment. However, technically it does not have to be so.

The ITA specifies that for donations of PUP, the minimum cost is deemed to be $1,000. This is true regardless of the actual cost to the owner. The ITA also deems the item sold for a minimum of $1,000, again regardless of the actual sale/donation value. So, when taken into the donor's tax return, there is no taxable event on items that are worth less than $1,000.

On the other hand, a tax receipt can still be issued for these types of items. The value on the receipt would reflect the item's fair market value. This receipt could then be used to generate some tax credits on the return (small though they may be). Charities should note, however, that valuing household items can be very difficult, and receipts should only be issued if value can be defensibly determined.

Example 1

Sulu bought a "Tickle Me Elmo" doll for $20. Shortly thereafter, it became a collector's item and the fair market value increased to $100. Realizing that there are needy children without a Tickle Me Elmo, Sulu donates the toy to a local charity. In return, he receives a tax receipt for the value of $100. On his tax return Sulu calculates his capital gain as follows:

Deemed Proceeds of Disposition	$1,000
Deemed Cost	-$1,000
Capital Gain	0

As there is no capital gain, there is no tax payable. On the other hand, Sulu will receive a tax receipt for the fair market value of the doll ($100). Applying our assumptions (i.e. a tax rate of 46% and Sulu has already made at least $200 of donations), the $100 receipt will allow Sulu to claim back $46 of taxes owing from other sources.

The implication of this policy is that when items are donated which have an actual value greater than $1,000 but a cost lower than $1,000, the value of the donation will be enhanced because the amount of the capital gain will be reduced.

Example 2

McCoy decides to donate a model train set that he purchased for $100, but has it appraised in advance and discovers to his delight that it is actually worth $2,000.

McCoy still decides to donate the train set to a willing charity, which issues him a receipt for $2,000. He then calculates his taxes as follows:

Actual Proceeds of Disposition	$2,000
Deemed Cost	$1,000
Capital Gain	$1,000
Tax	$230
Tax Credits	$920
Total leftover credits	$690

There are three notes to make about the type of property donated.

First, make sure that the property is actually transferable. While loyalty program points are property, some plans will not allow you to transfer the points to anyone else, and so they effectively cannot be donated. In this scenario, a donor may consider redeeming the points and then donating the actual item. Of course, this may prove to be of limited assistance to a charity that suddenly finds itself obligated to use a plane ticket to some place it did not want to go on a date it did not want to travel.

Second, both the individual and the charity must obtain a reliable valuation. From the perspective of the individual, an improper valuation could lead to a donation tax credit being disallowed by the CRA. The charity, on the other hand, has an obligation to issue proper receipts. So, if the receipts are overvalued, the charity may find itself facing uncomfortable questions from the CRA.

Finally, there are rules in the ITA which prevent situations where donors are buying and donating items that fall below the $1000 threshold simply to create tax receipts to shelter income from other sources. While the charity will not necessarily be punished if involved in such a scenario, the donor could have the receipts disallowed.

LISTED PERSONAL PROPERTY

Listed Personal Property (LPP) is a subclass of PUP. It consists of certain specific items which are held both as an investment and as hobby items. The list includes artwork, stamps, books, coins and sculptures. Unless it is Certified Canadian Cultural Property (see earlier in this article), LPP has the same tax treatment as PUP.

REAL ESTATE

Generally, the donation of most real estate will be treated like the donation of any other type of capital property. If the item is inventory, the donor will be taxed on the full proceeds of disposition, and, if the item is capital, the donor will only pay tax on 50% of the proceeds of disposition. There are, however, two significant exceptions to this rule.

Principal residence

The first exception is the donation of a principal residence. Canadian residents are not taxed on the gain arising from the appreciation of their principal residence. So, if a donor bought his home for $100,000 and sells (or donates) it when it is worth $1,000,000, no tax will be payable on the appreciation in value (assuming the home was the donor's principal residence for that entire time).

If the donor were to donate the home to a charity, not only would there be no tax consequences on the disposition, but he or she would receive a tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the home at the time of the donation.

In some cases, it might make sense for the donor to leave their home to a charity in their Will. By doing this, they might be able to use the tax credits from the donation to offset the income from the deemed disposition of their other assets and carry back the credits to the previous year. In both the year of death and the year preceding death, the estate can use the tax credits to offset up to 100 per cent of the income. Given that the deemed disposition of assets (except for the principal residence) usually results in a large income in the year of death, the donor might, in fact, be able to do some significant tax planning in this way.

Environmental property

The donation of environmental property has a treatment similar to that of Certified Cultural Property. The treatment applies where property is designated as ecologically sensitive land by the Minister of the Environment (or a person designated by the Minister) and donated to any of:

- The federal or a provincial government;
- A municipality in Canada;
- A municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada; or,
- A registered charity that has a main purpose (in the opinion of that Minister) of conserving and protecting Canada's environmental heritage, and that is approved by that Minister or that person in respect of the gift.

In any of these cases, there will be no taxable capital gain on the donation.

We have described the specific tax treatment of items donated where there is no tax on the capital gain of the item in the sections on public securities and certified cultural property. The only significant difference is that tax credits generated from a donation of this type may be carried forward for ten years. The entire value of the donation is available to offset tax owing from other sources at the highest rates.

RESIDUAL INTERESTS

It is possible to divide ownership of the property during one's life (called a life interest) from ownership upon the death of that person (called a residual interest). Once the residual interest is sold or given away, however, the property will belong to the owner of the residual interest when the owner of the life interest dies. A donor might consider this course of action in situations where they want to enjoy the income or use of the property during their lifetime and yet donate the property to the charity during their lifetime as opposed to on their death.

The value of the residual interest is calculated using an estimated value of the underlying property at the expected death of the donor (in itself determined from actuarial mortality tables) using present value dollars. This amount will be the value listed on the charity's donation receipt.

Determining the fair market value of a property at the expected death of the owner at some point in the future is a complicated mathematical task best left to a qualified actuary and appraiser.

From a tax perspective, when the owner divides the rights and donates the residual interest, the donor would generally incur a tax consequence. The tax owing will be a function of the cost of the right to the owner and its estimated value at the time of disposition. Generally speaking, this income will be treated as a capital gain. The capital gain is calculated according to a specific formula and depends on the gain in value of the residual interest relative to the entire property.

CHARITABLE REMAINDER TRUST

A trust is a legal device which effectively accomplishes one or both of the following objectives:

- It separates the ownership of property (the capital interest) from the right to receive income from the property (the income interest); and,
- It can separate the person who legally controls the property from those entitled to benefit from it.

A Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT) is similar to the donation of a residual interest in that it allows the donor to donate the capital of the trust now, but the charity does not receive it until some later point (such as on the death of the donor). A CRT is particularly useful in situations where it is difficult to record the division of interests on title (such as artwork). Despite its legal potency, creating a CRT is simply a matter of signing the appropriate legal documents.

When a donor creates a CRT, they dispose of the residual interest in the property to the trust and then donates the certain rights in the trust to the charity (the "capital interest"). It is important to note that the donation in this case occurs when the owner transfers the interest in the trust to the charity. Thus, if the underlying property is, for example, publicly-traded securities, the gift of an interest in the trust will not attract the same favourable tax treatment as donating the securities would have; it is a donation of an interest in a trust, not of securities.

The special tax treatment assigned to different types of property outlined elsewhere in this chapter (i.e. ecological property, publicly traded securities, or certified cultural property) likely makes them inappropriate candidates for this type of donation.

It is important not to create the trust with the charity as the beneficiary, because if the donor is not careful, they will gift an interest in the trust with no property (and thus no value on the receipt), and any subsequent disposition to the trust will not be considered a gift by the CRA. The appropriate method is instead to create the trust with the donor holding both interests in the trust.

The donor then contributes the assets to the trust, and finally donates the capital interest to the charity. Of course, the donor would retain the income interest as long as is set out in the trust deed.

GIFTS TO U.S. CHARITIES

Individuals who reside in Canada and commute to their employment or place of business in the United States are allowed to deduct donations made to U.S. charitable organizations on the same terms as donations made to Canadian organizations.

There are, however, several other important conditions which must be met. Firstly, the commuter must live near the American border during the whole of the taxation year. Secondly, their U.S. employment or business income must represent the donor's chief source of income for that year. Thirdly, the donor must be able to demonstrate that the gift was made to a religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organization created or organized in or under the laws of the United States. Finally, they must be able to demonstrate that such a gift would be allowed as a deduction under the United States Internal Revenue Code. Where all those conditions are met, the donations in question are treated as donations made to a registered charity.

VOLUNTEER SERVICES

The ITA makes it very clear that only a gift to a charity is receiptable. A gift includes property or a right to property. Unfortunately, services do not qualify as property and, therefore, are not receiptable.

GIFT BY WILL

One legal requirement of a gift is actual delivery of the gift to the recipient. However, where a gift is made by Will, such delivery is impossible until after the death of the person—sometimes well after. Under normal circumstances, the gift would not be complete until delivery is made. However, the law allows that where a gift is made by Will, it will be considered to have been made by the deceased in the few seconds preceding death, assuming of course that delivery occurs at some point after the death. In this way, the tax credits that are generated by the donation can be applied to the donor's year of death. This is particularly useful as there is often a large tax bill owing on death.

The law allows for certain differences from a strict calculation perspective. As previously discussed, a donor is generally only entitled to offset 75% of their taxable income using donation tax credits in a given year.

However, in the year of death (i.e. from January 1st until the date of the donor's death) the donor is entitled to offset up to 100% of their income, as filed by their executor. Any unused donation tax credits can be carried back one year, to the year preceding death, and be used to offset 100% of the tax debt owing in that year as well as the tax in the first three taxation years of the estate. One stipulation though is that the gift must be transferred (and accepted) by the qualified donee within three years of the death. Obviously, if the return for the year preceding death has already been filed, then it will be necessary to file an adjustment request to claim the donation tax credits.

APPLICATION OF AMT

The Alternative Minimum Tax (the "AMT") has been part of the income tax system in Canada since 1986, many people have not heard of it because it typically does not apply to people whose main source of income is salary. As the name implies, the idea is that if a Canadian taxpayer would pay less tax under the usual set of calculations than under those required by the AMT, then the individual would be required to pay the higher of the two tax rates.

If someone is required to pay the AMT, they would only be entitled to 50% of the credits that they would otherwise be entitled. And, for donations of publicly listed shares, the individual would still be required to pay tax on 30% of any capital gain realized on the donation.

BOOKS AND RECORDS

The Canadian income tax system is based upon the principle of honest self-reporting. Consequently, one of the most pervasive issues facing charities is the maintenance of proper books and records. The importance of the issue is underlined when it is understood that charities are usually in the process of proving their innocence rather than disproving their guilt. Without records, this is close to impossible. Indeed, if the charity were to appeal a decision of revocation of its status by the CRA, it would not even be entitled to give oral testimony. So, the importance of well-maintained records is paramount.

What are books and records?

There is no standard definition of books and records. Fundamentally, however, an organization must have sufficient evidence to show that it is in compliance with the Act. To be clear, destroying evidence that an organization is not in compliance will not help the organization, as the lack of documents, in and of itself, is an offence. (Although the documents could be evidence of an offence with a more grievous penalty.)

There is a difference between the two concepts of 'books' and 'records'. 'Books' is not a defined term in the Income Tax Act but is typically understood to be accounting records. A 'record' is defined and includes "an account, an agreement, a book, a charter table, a diagram, a form, an image, an invoice, a letter, a map, a memorandum, a plan, a return, a statement, a telegram, a voucher, and any other thing containing information whether written or in any other form."

No distinction is made in law between corporate and transactional records, but it is helpful to organize a charity by thinking in these terms. Corporate records are those documents required by law to define a corporation and its governance. They are often created with the co-operation of a government office and are required so that the corporation meets certain statutory requirements. Transactional records are those created by the organization to keep track of its operations and meetings. They still help the corporation meet its requirements under the law.

Corporate Records

A corporate entity must maintain current copies of its constituting documents (Articles of Incorporation, Articles of Continuance, Letters of Patent, Supplementary Letters of Patent, etc.), bylaws and minutes of meetings or resolutions. Organizations operating in more than one province would also be expected to have copies of their extra-provincial registration.

Meetings

Compliance with the various corporate acts requires minutes of meetings of both directors and members. Members generally meet annually while directors generally meet more often – both should have records of all their formal meetings. If issues are discussed at informal meetings, it is a good idea to make records of those as well. Often, the fact that it had the discussion is in itself valuable and it would be unwise for a charity to self-censor its minutes.

Format

There is no specific requirement that the record of happenings at meetings be kept in any particular way for the CRA's purposes (although for purposes of consistency, groups may wish to follow standard processes). Therefore, meetings that simply have notes of what was said and confirmed as accurate by the bulk of the attendees at the meeting are sufficient for most purposes.

Keep in mind that most corporate statutes do mandate that certain issues be dealt with by the members and/or directors and there may be technical requirements be met in the resolution.

Transactional Records

The vast majority of records held by a charity are its 'transactional' records. They are created by the day-to-day transactions of the organization and include its bank account statements, cheques, records of employee payment, invoices, statements of account, deposit books, etc. These are generally easy records for the organization to obtain as they are created by third parties. The challenge for most charities is to organize these records into some logical format in order that their T3010 can be produced at the end of the year. This role generally falls to a bookkeeper or some other individual prepared to keep these records.

On the assumption that the bulk of these records are being created by a third party, and that the charity simply needs to keep them, the charity will not face any difficulty in ensuring that its transactions are properly maintained. However, there are situations in which a charity faces difficulties because it is in a non-commercial or non-traditional setting.

Charities that engage in relief of poverty may find it difficult to track the expenditures with which they give alms to the poor. This can be obvious in a situation where the charity distributes food to individuals that simply need it or seem to need it. While the CRA is obviously aware that a charity is engaged in the provision of food for the hungry, it may ask how it can be certain that food is being given only to the poor and is not, for example, being distributed to the employees of the organization or being sold. While the CRA can be forgiving in such situations, it can, in some cases, be extremely difficult to ensure that records are maintained, to demonstrate that the charity's resources are being properly used.

Some foreign countries present another problem in that often the normal transactional records we would expect in Canada – say on the purchase of office supplies – simply may not exist there. Receipts and invoices are simply not used in some parts of the world. Charities should seek alternate means to track their resources.

Additional Records

Again, while there is no legal definition of 'additional records' these may include emails, or letters to the organization — and they may include records that the organization purposely creates in order that the CRA, if it ever looks to see, will accept as proof that the organization is properly meeting its responsibilities. Emails to and from the organization and letters to the organization must clearly be maintained. Charity officials should be careful to separate out their personal from official comments as an official may be unable to claim privacy over these emails. Moreover, emails between individuals may not necessarily be entered into the charity's records (say in a situation where they are not being saved by a corporate server). In these circumstances, directors should make sure to copy the charity so that the charity's obligations to keep records is met.

Creating Records

The organization may also seek to create records to show that it meets the legal tests involved. For example, to ensure that a charity's resources are properly used in a foreign country the charity may have the volunteers make reports, take pictures or record videos that are not otherwise necessary. Obviously, a charity must first understand the legal principle that it seeks to establish before creating the record. On this point, the charity should seek legal advice before proceeding.

Fundamentally, it is important that a charity understand what it must show in its records to comply with the law should the CRA investigate. Continuous education regarding a charity's obligations is critical so that the administration of the organization understands when to ask for reports of directors or others in whatever circumstances.

Where must they be kept?

The books and records of an organization must be kept, by law, at its registered office address. This, however, is often an impossible task because the legal documents may be more easily kept at a lawyer's office, accounting records may be with the accountant, and other records may be with the organization. It can be inconvenient and costly to keep all the records in one place – particularly if they are voluminous.

The CRA seems to understand the practical difficulties in this aspect and does not, as a matter of course, seek to confirm the location of these records.

During an audit, CRA auditors generally either ask for information to be provided to them or meet at a mutually convenient location where the records are produced.

Nevertheless, we have seen instances where charities lose track of the location of their documents and so it would be wise for an organization to be aware of its records should they have to be produced.

Electronic Record Keeping

Nowadays, more and more records are either created in paper format for conversion to electronic format or in electronic format able to be printed at any time. Obviously, the CRA is as much interested in easy record-keeping as anybody else, and rules do exist for doing so electronically. These rules are outlined in two technical documents from the CRA – IC78-10R5 and IC05-1R1.

An organization that keeps electronic records must be able to provide them in an electronically readable and useable format to the CRA auditors so that they can be read on CRA equipment (although not every CRA department will accept electronic documents). For most modern records this is not an issue if they can be produced in PDF format.

A regular problem is that the organization uses a bookkeeping or accounting software unknown to the CRA.

However, as these records can often be converted from one format to another, there is usually a workaround.

Electronic files can be encrypted, but the password must be provided to the CRA if requested.

If a record was originally created in paper format and then converted to electronic, the paper does not need to be kept. However, an electronic record must always be kept, even if converted from one format to another.

The CRA does allow for the keeping of these records online in the cloud. However, their requirement is that the server be located in Canada or at least that a copy of the records be maintained on a server in Canada.

One difficulty that arises from time to time — and it does not apply only to electronic records — is the accidental destruction of records. With paper records this can happen in terms of a fire or some other disaster. But with electronic records, the loss of a USB key could undermine years of work by the organization. For this reason, electronic records should be copied and kept in safe, redundant locations as much as possible. If records are lost, the CRA may seek proof or a reason for such a loss and may be forgiving in the circumstance. However, there's no guarantee that the CRA will take this approach, and you can assume that the CRA auditors have heard the “dog ate my homework” type of excuse more often than most teachers.

How long to keep records

Generally speaking, all books and records must be kept for a minimum of six years from the end of the last tax year from which they relate. The tax year end is the same as the fiscal year end for the corporation, but is, by definition, the calendar year end for trusts and unincorporated associations. For purposes of the Employment Insurance Act and the Canada Pension Plan Act, the retention period begins at the end of the calendar year to which the books and records relate.

Technically, duplicate donation receipts of a registered charity (other than receipts for donations of property, which may be held for longer periods of time) is two years from the end of the calendar year in which the donations were made — but it would be inadvisable for a charity to rely on this specific requirement rather than the general one.

The obligations above relate to the Income Tax Act, but it is important to understand that obligations also exist in the various corporate acts. Typically, Corporate Records (as opposed to Transactional Records) are not destroyed.

Who Can See Records

Outside of the civil litigation — in which a Plaintiff or Defendant could be compelled to produce documents relating to the litigation — there are really three groups of individuals who may be able to see various parts of corporate records. The directors, the members and government officials each have different levels of access to the charity's records — depending upon the circumstances.

What Language

The law requires that books and records be kept in either English or French.

Organizations that operate overseas typically have records in another language, and while technically the organization should have them translated as they are produced, practically this is often an expensive task. Moreover, CRA audit procedures limit an audit to a certain number of years, translating every document as it comes through may be unnecessary for years that are not under audit.

Even for years under audit, the CRA at times requests just sample documents, so the charity may be in the position of translating documents that will never be read.

Generally, the CRA allows a period of time to produce documents and understands that organizations operating in non-English or French-speaking parts of the world will have documents in other languages. Indeed, if someone sends an email to an organization in a language that is not English, the organization can hardly be faulted for the fact that its books and records are only in English or French.

HONORING CAREGIVERS

Healthcare's Unsung Heroes

The Canadian Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation (CPFF) stands in heartfelt recognition of the exceptional dedication displayed by caregivers of pulmonary fibrosis patients. CPFF provides caregivers with a comprehensive array of resources, information, and a nurturing community that appreciates the unique challenges they face while caring for individuals with chronic respiratory conditions. We empower caregivers with tools, knowledge, and networks to gain a deeper understanding of the conditions their loved ones confront.

Caregivers are the often-uncelebrated champions within our healthcare system, going far beyond their roles as mere physical caretakers. They serve as unwavering pillars of emotional support, offering comfort and advocating for those under their care. During times of illness or disability, caregivers emerge as beacons of reassurance, empathy, and security, effectively alleviating the emotional burden on patients and nurturing their mental well-being.

From assisting with daily tasks like bathing and meal preparation to preserving the independence and dignity of those they serve, caregivers significantly enhance the quality of life for their charges, bringing about profound transformations.

Administering medications is crucial for many patients, and caregivers play a pivotal role in ensuring adherence, consequently reducing complications and hospitalizations. Furthermore, they act as navigators within the intricate healthcare landscape, empowering patients to make informed decisions about their health.

Caregivers provide a sense of consistency and continuity to patient care, enabling seamless transitions between healthcare settings and preventing costly readmissions.

Their impact extends beyond emotional and physical well-being; caregivers also wield substantial financial influence. Through their efforts to prevent readmissions, promote adherence, and minimize emergency room visits, they actively contribute to reducing healthcare costs, enabling patients to remain in their homes and communities, offering a cost-effective healthcare solution.

In conclusion, caregivers are the unsung heroes of the healthcare realm, enriching both the physical and emotional aspects of well-being. It is our responsibility to acknowledge, support, and equip these remarkable individuals with the necessary resources and training. CPFF leads this initiative, holding the key to improved patient outcomes, reduced costs, and an enhanced quality of life for those in need of care. We express our gratitude to the Hurding and Pal families for sharing their journeys with us on www.cpff.ca. Let us ensure that caregivers can continue their invaluable service to society, with them and CPFF leading the way in Canada; visit www.cpff.ca.

ESTATE PLANNING

Gifts of Real Estate, with Restrictions

Early in my charitable planning career my employer was offered a donation of islands on Georgian Bay. Surrounding the 100-year-old family cottage were sheds, cabins and boat houses. The donors had a vision: it would be a children's camp.

It was a stunning property. Valuable, despite the sagging, mouse-infested buildings. But this gift by will was contingent and restricted. It would be a children's camp, or nothing at all. The gift never happened.

Looking back, I feel the donors' palpable regret and disappointment. They were in the late 70s. They loved those islands. It was unbearable to see the cottage sold, torn down, desecrated.

The charity, however, had no need of the islands or a camp. It had no funds to develop or operate the facility. We suggested, tentatively, that it could be sold and the funds used for the charity's core mission. Regrettably, the donors thought we were rude and greedy.

Real Estate Restricted to Use

Since that first experience, I have met a number of well-intention donors with similar dreams. What dreams? A Victorian rooming house, well, mansion, for a humane homeless shelter. An artist's cottage for a writer's retreat. A country estate for a university campus. A farm for an animal sanctuary. A heritage house for a museum.

These donors were all deeply invested in their vision and property. As a result, they have a hard time understanding the practical issues for the receiving charity. Sometimes the charity already exists, and, of course, has other programs. Sometimes a new charity had to be created to carry out the purposes. Either way, the operational challenges were significant.

All property donations require a contingency plan. During the planning process, it's best to address the monetary value of the property and the core mission of the charity. This discussion is essential, and just the start.

Due Diligence Questions

Here's some practical questions for donors, gift planners, lawyers and charities to consider:

1. What is best charity to hold the property and carry out the intended purpose?

Malcolm Burrows

Head of Philanthropic Advisory Services
at Scotia Wealth Management

2. How will ongoing programs be funded?
3. What are the zoning issues?
4. Are there capital improvement costs?
5. How much are taxes, insurance, programs, and maintenance?
6. What happens after the first 20 years? Who will run the programs? Will there be a need?
7. Is there any plan to make additional donations, in addition to the real estate?
8. Is there a gift agreement? If so, does it include a variation of purpose clause so the property can be sold?
9. If the property is sold, how will the funds be used?

Good charitable estate planning involving real estate starts with frank discussion. It's important to recognize the cost and responsibility associated with big dreams and special properties.

WILLS

The Cy-Près Doctrine: When Good Intentions Count For Something

The cy-près doctrine

It is common practice to leave a gift to a charity in your will. However, the charity that the testator wished to support may not have been named properly in the will (leading to confusion about who was supposed to benefit from the funds), or may have ceased to exist by the time the testator died.

Where a testator intended to benefit a charity, the courts have special powers to correct the errors in the will and ensure the funds are used for a charitable purpose.

In most cases, where a gift in the will cannot be paid to the intended recipient, the gift lapses and falls into the residue of the estate. However, the Superior Court has the inherent jurisdiction to apply the cy-près power, an equitable remedy relating to charitable trusts, to save the gift and carry out the testator's charitable and philanthropic intentions. This power, sometimes referred to as a "scheme-making" power, allows the Court to order the estate trustee to distribute the funds to a charity that has a similar purpose to the charity originally contemplated by the testator in the will.

Before the court will invoke this power, it must find that the testator: (i) set out a clear "general charitable intention" in the will and (ii) that it is impossible or impractical to carry out the testator's intentions. Further, the alternate charity selected must have the same or similar charitable aims as the charitable organization or purpose originally contemplated by the testator. In this way, the court ensures that the testator's general charitable intention is carried out, even though the testator's specific instructions could not be.

Dors et al. v. the PGT

The court was asked to apply the cy-près doctrine in Dors et al. v. The Public Guardian and Trustee. In that case, the testator chose to continue her lifelong philanthropic efforts by gifting 95% of the residue of her estate to no fewer than 20 charities. The recipient of one of the largest shares of the residue (20%, which equated to approximately $120,000) was the Pan American Mission in Canada, a Christian charity based in Calgary that cared for orphans in South America. Unbeknownst to the testator, this charity had been dissolved in Canada and the USA in 2012 or 2013, nearly a decade after she signed her will in 2006.

Faced with the fact that the Pan American Mission in Canada no longer existed, the estate trustee commenced a court application asking a judge to declare that the gift to that charity lapsed and its 20% share should be distributed between the other 19 charitable beneficiaries according to their entitlement. The Public Guardian and Trustee opposed the estate trustee's request, arguing instead that the court should apply the cy-près doctrine to "save" the gift by choosing a different charity with a similar purpose as the Pan American Mission in Canada.

Jonathan Pellow,
Associate, de Vries Litigation LLP

The Court agreed with the Public Guardian and Trustee. Citing Romanic et al v La Fabrique de la Paroisse Sainte-Sophie et al., 2020 ONSC 3534 and Re Jacobsen 1977, CanLII 1733 (BC SC) the Court held that this was an appropriate instance to apply the cy-près doctrine: Justice Gilmore held that the general charitable intent of the testator in the will was clear, but it was impossible to carry out due the dissolution of the Pan American Mission in Canada. Furthermore, the court held that while the other 19 charities named in the will had a variety of charitable purposes, none were involved in the care for orphans in South America. As a result, the testator's charitable purpose would be defeated those charities received the funds originally allocated to the Pan American Mission in Canada. Instead, the Court ordered the estate trustees to find another charity with a similar goal to the Pan American Mission in Canada and distribute the funds to that organization.

Will New AMT Proposals Crimp Canadian's Charitable Giving?

Mark Halpern, CFP, TEP, MFA-P
CEO of WEALTHinsurance.com®

In the wake of the federal budget, experts in philanthropic planning and tax professionals raised concerns that new proposals surrounding the alternative minimum tax regime might have a dampening effect on high-net-worth individuals' giving intentions.

The industry has had several months to pore through and digest the language – and it seems the impact on philanthropy may be more dramatic than initially thought.

“The AMT, alternative minimum tax, was introduced back in 1986 to account for situations where someone might receive income that's not considered taxable under the standard income tax system,” says Mark Halpern, CEO of WEALTHinsurance.com in north Toronto. “The new proposed AMT regime in 2024 will impact more people and increase the impact on those already captured within the AMT. And it's going to be a problem for charitable donations.”

According to Halpern, the proposed AMT rules set to kick in January 1, 2024 will have major implications for in-kind donations of non-registered appreciated securities such as stocks, segregated funds, ETFs, and mutual funds to charity. For those types of donations, donors can claim a tax deduction against the fair market value of the securities, and they won't have to incur tax on the capital gains from those securities.

As it stands, the zero per cent inclusion of capital gains for in-kind donations also applies for AMT purposes. But under the proposed new AMT rules, 30% of capital gains on publicly listed securities that are donated in-kind would be counted under adjusted taxable income. The government is also widening the AMT income base by increasing the AMT capital gains inclusion rate to 100% from 80%.

“Currently, when someone has a liquidity event – selling their business, for example, or selling real estate – they may want to use in-kind charitable donations to mitigate some of the tax on that,” Halpern says. “The proposed AMT rules would make it less attractive for them to do so.”

Halpern notes that the AMT rules don't apply to charitable donations on death, which is why the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) is encouraging high-net-worth and ultra-high-net-worth individuals to bake strategic philanthropy into their estate plans.

For those thinking about giving in-kind donations of securities with warm hands, he suggests they should consider moving forward with plans and strategies within 2023. One approach, he suggests, is to open a donor advised fund and make a contribution there immediately. That would let them take full advantage of the deductions today, and use the money stocked up in the account for charity in the future.

“Most trusted advisors – tax professionals, lawyers, investment advisors, insurance professionals – they're the gatekeepers on helping clients. It's really important that they understand the potential impact of this on charitable giving, so they could flag it and possibly make course corrections before 2024 rolls around,” Halpern says. To help spread awareness on the impact of AMT, he held a LinkedIn Live session with Ali Spinner, a tax partner at Crowe Soberman on July 9. A recording of that session can be found at: <https://lnkd.in/gp55B-3NW>

“Charitable planning professionals have always been mindful of AMT. They've always had their eye on those goalposts,” Halpern adds. “Now those goalposts are becoming much narrower, so I would encourage people to lobby and raise their concerns with the government.”

CLIMATE CHANGE

Wildfires, Wildlife and What We Can Do

For months now, we've been witness to a country on fire. From Vancouver Island to Newfoundland, nearly every part of Canada has experienced what's been declared the country's worst wild-fire season on record.

We are seeing a lot more fire this year than in previous years, and we're seeing records set in many places. Forests are not as resistant to fires as they once were. Climate change is altering rainfall cycles and creating hotter and drier conditions around the country, factors which increase the risk of more frequent and more severe wildfires.

Other factors can affect fire, too. For example, in B.C., pine beetles can now survive the winter because of milder weather from global warming. These beetles kill standing trees, essentially creating areas with ample kindling that become perfect fire conditions. Ongoing deforestation further contributes to drier, more combustible conditions.

But as hard as it is to hear about these wildfires and the effects on people and wildlife, it's important to remember that some fires are a natural part of nature and ecosystem processes. Many plants and animals have adapted to fire, and a few even depend on fire for parts of their life cycles.

Some animals are also really good at getting away from threats like fires — large mammals and birds can move quickly once they detect fire, while smaller or less mobile species, such as frogs, turtles, snakes and small mammals, can use underground burrows to protect themselves. But as these fires also grow in size and intensity, it becomes increasingly difficult for these animals to escape in time.

The ones that do survive must either move to a new area or adapt to the fire-ravaged area and then find adequate food and shelter. This could be particularly difficult for territorial mammals that require a lot of space like the wolverine, which is a threatened species that lives in Canada's boreal forest, and if displaced would have to compete with other wolverines for habitat. Animals are also affected by smoke from fires just like us — although there aren't many, studies looking at the effects of smoke on wildlife show that they're susceptible to acute and chronic health issues.

Of course, the species and populations most vulnerable to fires are the ones already at risk from other threats such as habitat loss, pollution, invasive species and overexploitation. Any time we have a population that is low, it is particularly vulnerable because a single event like a fire can have big impact on its small population. Species at risk like woodland caribou or spotted owl that depend on mature or old-growth forests, and may see further declines as these habitats are affected. Woodland caribou rely on lichen as a food source, but lichens burn quite easily and recover slowly after a fire, further limiting suitable habitat.

Emily Giles,
Senior Manager, Science, Knowledge, and Innovation

One important way we can mitigate these fire-related impacts is habitat restoration. We can help to build more climate-resistant forests through species diversity. For example, WWF-Canada is supporting efforts by the Secwepemcū'ecw Restoration and Stewardship Society (SRSS) to build resilience by planting a greater diversity of trees, especially hardwoods, as they reforest Elephant Hill, the site of one of B.C.'s worst-ever wildfires, and other adjacent fire-impacted sites. SRSS, which planted 450,000 trees so far this year, is taking these climate adaptation principles into account while restoring Secwepemc territory.

Climate change is here now, so we need to be prepared. We know that we will continue to face more and more frequent fires, with higher intensities, and in regions that haven't experienced large-scale fires before.

We need to make sure that our forests, which are home to many species at risk as well as important carbon stores, receive adequate protection and management so that they can continue to exist into the future. And these actions need to be taken alongside Indigenous communities, who have been stewarding lands and waters in their territories for thousands of years.

Emily Giles, Senior Manager, Science, Knowledge, and Innovation, explains why this is happening, how it's affecting wildlife and why restoration is so important.

PLANNED GIVING

Canada Life's Simple Solution for a Lasting Legacy

My Par Gift introduces an insurance product with a single premium payment designed for charitable giving.

Planned giving is a bequest that allows donors to have a positive impact on a cherished cause long after they are gone. While the idea is simple, the practicalities can be complicated, especially if someone wants to donate the proceeds of an insurance policy.

It's a problem that experts at Canada Life have been discussing for years, and in March they announced their solution.

"There have been a number of complexities and barriers that have made it difficult to use insurance in the planned giving space," said Andrea Frossard, Senior Vice-President, Par Insurance Solutions at Canada Life. "So we created My Par Gift, a unique, simple solution that addresses the pain points associated with planned giving."

A key pain point with the use of insurance in charity is the need for donors to maintain regular premium payments. Donors may not always be able to continue to make premium payments. This creates a source of uncertainty for the receiving charity, which could lose the gift if those premiums aren't paid.

My Par Gift solves this problem by creating a single premium payment solution.

"The donor just makes a one-time premium payment, and the charity is the owner and beneficiary of the policy," explains Vikram Malik, Vice-President, Par Pricing & Special Initiatives at Canada Life.

"From that point forward, the charity has full control of the policy. They can access the cash values, get any dividends the policy may receive, and of course they also get the death benefit at the end. That's what makes it so simple – for the donor, the charity, and the advisor as well."

• • •

Solving problems

Planned giving has become an increasingly popular form of charity. It can provide tax benefits to the donor, while ensuring they leave a lasting legacy for the organizations and causes they support. However, it's an area where insurers have struggled to keep pace.

"While there has been a lot of growth in planned giving over the last 15 years, there has been very little growth with insurance in planned giving," Malik says. "So, when we stepped back and asked why, we saw an opportunity to change how this insurance could support planned giving."

"This was in the works for almost two years," Frossard says. "It was a new market for Canada Life. We took the time to learn about the challenges for donors, as well as the nuanced needs of charities."

• • •

Charity begins at home

Although this particular slice of the insurance market may have been new to the creators of My Par Gift, they are no strangers to the importance of charity. As a company, Canada Life donated over $11 million to communities across the country last year, while employees contributed another $2.3 million on their own.

"My Par Gift is very aligned with Canada Life's values," Frossard says. "When we worked with advisors, charities, and the Canadian Association of Gift Planners to understand the challenges, we saw a way to demonstrate our commitment to others."

One of the first challenges they faced was the complexity surrounding the use of insurance for charity. While it's typical for an insurance product to be continuously serviced for decades after a policy begins, this ongoing need to revisit the policy was a burden for both the donor and charity.

"It created a lot of inertia," Malik says. "We were hearing that ongoing premium payments were triggering difficult conversations between advisors and their clients. By removing those barriers, we enabled new conversations and created new opportunities."

The launch

My Par Gift is very new. Launched on March 30, it's been circulating among advisors and donors, creating a lot of buzz in the industry.

Asked what charities will benefit most from the introduction of My Par Gift, Malik pointed to the more than 80,000 registered charities in Canada that would welcome less administration and more certainty.

“Some charities may be more likely to embrace insurance,” he said. “Charities that have a legacy planning focus are typically a good fit, but My Par Gift is really for any charity that wants to invest in its future.”

Frossard agrees.

“Since its launch, we've heard from a lot of charities that want to learn more. It's been described as a game-changer, and this is just the beginning.”

slowly closes before the new AMT rules take effect, he says charitable institutions should be aware of how the AMT proposals could impact them. Those institutions that are most in need, he says, should think about contacting their largest donors to look at creating gifts immediately.

“The charitable industry was greatly impacted by Covid-19. People are more nervous about their personal financial situation, so their giving is a little bit tighter,” Halpern says. “The government can't sustain the social fabric of Canada on their own, so if anything, we should be finding more ways to encourage people to give.”

PROFILE

Cookie, a resident at Newcastle

A Safe & Supportive Community for Residents

A safe place for many who lived on the street, this complex is a thriving community that embraces the artistic natures and green thumbs of its residents.

Island Care Crisis Centre (ICCS) is part of the Good Neighbour series where we share the stories of individuals and agencies who are impacted by homelessness. The individuals at risk of homelessness, the souls who have experienced homelessness and are seeking a way forward, and those who are the “hidden homeless.”

No one chooses to be homeless. No one hopes to find themselves living on the edge – wondering if they can afford food or rent, searching for a safe place to sleep at night, finding somewhere to settle.

Everyone has a voice. Everyone has a story. Everyone matters.

Hope is transformative

“When we first opened, we took photographs of all the 78 people coming in. Within three months we had to retake most of the photographs because you could not recognize the person who had no hope and no home from the person three months later who had a home, hope, support, meals, and physical and mental health assistance.”

The statement, by Sandra, Manager at Island Crisis Care Society’s Newcastle Place, voices a thought that stays with you as you ponder its meaning and impact. It encompasses so much more than a visible change in features – it speaks to the hope that transforms that face; it’s the benefits of proper food, it is the result of health care, and it’s a testament to what housing can do for those who didn’t have shelter.

The change is so marked that it’s become standard practice to take another photo three months later when new residents move in.

Where art flourishes

Within the complex is a thriving community, one that embraces the artistic nature of many of its residents. “We have a lot of programs in the evenings and on weekends, so there’s arts and crafts,” says Sandra. “And I mean the artistic talent is through the roof. We’ve got a lot of beautiful artists. We’ve had an art gallery and art show for three years with beautiful pieces carved by some of our Indigenous clients. We also have a lot of musicians on our site, so they might have we call ‘rock’n the jams’ and they’ll get out the guitars and tambourines and have a little music.”

Another hugely popular activity is gardening. “Believe me, there’s a lot of good gardeners,” says Sandra. “They’re fighting over the garden plots in the back.”

Arts and gardening are not the only activities available at Newcastle either. A Life Skills Coordinator works with clients on computer literacy, decluttering their rooms, communication strategies, and other topics under the banner of life skills. There are basketball nets, volleyball spaces, and other sports activities. For a quieter time, clients can spend time in the Rec Room colouring or watching a hockey playoff. There’s even yoga and Tai Chi classes facilitated by staff members and residents.

A supportive environment brings growth

As Sandra explains, “We give people a home with support. So, unlike a rental in an apartment where there are no wraparound services and the landlord doesn’t really care about you, we’re that landlord that does really care about our people.”

Services are as varied as the residents and suited to their needs. “We have psych nurses come on site, they can meet with a doctor every second week, see regular RNs, or social workers. Caseworkers on the site will refer to dentists and counselling...it’s not like a regular rental unit where you’re on your own, we can provide a lot on site but also connect them to further services.” Through ICCS, residents can also access a variety of services including a pre-employment program.

“Once they get that roof over their heads, it’s no longer just about survival. Now they can move on up in the hierarchy of needs. Maybe they can learn a new skill or go to a life skills workshop. We can start to work on harm reduction. We also work with them on goal planning and check in where they're at."

The wraparound services are what Sandra considers "the most important." Residents come to them with traumas, addictions, brain injuries, and cognitive issues, all of which led to being homeless for a part of their life.

A safe place becomes the starting point

For many of the residents, Newcastle is a safe place they can find a home. "We had a gal who was really quite, introverted, and maybe a little people-phobic. She was so traumatized she didn't want to go out in the bigger population, so it felt like a safe place where she could pretty much meet all her needs. Probation officers, doctors and caseworkers would come to see her on site. We'd assist her if she gave us a grocer list."

However, adjusting to life in Newcastle can also be difficult for some of the residents. "We meet them where they're at;

truly have to meet them where they're at. There's no point discussing treatment with somebody who's two days out of sleeping rough and just completely shell shocked by having their own room and hot meals. We always let people settle in so they can feel safe and comfortable." It's only after a settlement period that the rest of the services come into play.

Not all find that feeling of safety and comfort though, and for those folks, supportive housing is not a good fit. The rules can feel constrictive with a no weapons, no smoking in their rooms, and no guests allowed. "They don't really want to be helped and we are here to help vulnerable people who are homeless. They may be involved in crime or something. They're usually not in for very long." For the ones who are open to help, despite their initial sentiments, the structure and care helps them thrive.

It takes a village

When we hear the expression, "it takes a village," it's usually in relation to children. However, with a broader viewpoint it's as much about community and a shared sense of responsibility.

Throughout the conversation with Sandra, this becomes a recurring sentiment.

"There's a real sense of community and supporting each other, advocating for each other. It's like a little village."

A sense of community is important when, for more than a few of the residents, supportive housing will be their home going forward. While some do move on, many won't. "There's no end game in supportive housing. This is their home," says Sandra. A village is what it takes to create a home for them, something that can only be done when a sense of community is embraced, and the village supported.

Funding to agencies through The Government of Canada's Reaching Home: Canada's Homelessness Strategy, administered by United Way British Columbia on behalf of Community Advisory Boards, helps people like those living in Newcastle in our communities.

WILLS

When a Beneficiary Dies Before the Deceased

Ian M Hull,
Co-founder, Hull & Hull, LLP

Geoffrey Sculthorpe,
Associate at Hull & Hull LLP

Where the beneficiary under a will dies before the deceased, the will might direct an alternate beneficiary. The Estate Trustee should always review the will to determine who is entitled and, therefore, should be served with the Application for a Certificate of Appointment of Estate Trustee.

When the beneficiary dies before the deceased, the ‘anti-lapse’ provision in Section 31 of the Succession Law Reform Act could also be triggered.

This provision applies when a beneficiary who is the testator’s child, grandchild, or sibling dies before the testator. It can have the effect of enforcing the beneficiary’s gift and having said gift equally distributed amongst the deceased beneficiary’s spouse and/or issue alive at the time of their death, with the spouse and/or issue being unaffected by any outstanding debts they have been incurred at that time. It is often the case that a testator has forgotten to update their will to account for the death of one of their beneficiaries, so Section 31 seems to be in place to protect the interests of the beneficiary’s family from a testator who has not updated their will after the occurrence of a death of one of their beneficiaries.

When a beneficiary dies shortly following the deceased but within the survival period in the will.

Most wills have a survival clause. This clause will say how many days a beneficiary needs to survive the testator to be entitled to their inheritance. A typical period is 30 days. When a beneficiary dies within the survival period stated in the will, the beneficiary will be deemed to have died before the deceased. As a result, the beneficiary would not have an interest in the estate (if the will directs an alternate beneficiary). Therefore, it would not be necessary to serve the deceased beneficiary or the beneficiary’s estate with the Application for a Certificate of Appointment of Estate Trustee.

When a beneficiary lives past the survival period in the will.

When the beneficiary dies after the deceased but lives beyond the survival period, you will need to review the will to determine who is entitled to the beneficiary’s share of the estate (and therefore who should be served with the Application for a Certificate of Appointment of Estate Trustee). For example, a will may provide that the beneficiary receives a gift only if they survive a certain other person. In such a case, the beneficiary’s gift may lapse, and other beneficiaries may be entitled to the gift.

Unless the will provides otherwise, the beneficiary’s share of the estate may pass to the beneficiary’s estate. Therefore, the gift to the beneficiary would become part of their estate. In turn, the beneficiary’s estate would be distributed according to their will or, if they don’t have a will, it would be distributed under the rules of intestacy (pursuant to the Succession Law Reform Act, Part II Intestate Succession).

When a will does not have a survival clause.

Where the will does not have a survival clause and a beneficiary dies after the deceased but before the estate is distributed, the beneficiary’s share of the estate will go to the beneficiary’s own estate, and their estate should be served with the Application for a Certificate of Appointment of Estate Trustee.

PLANIFICATION DES DONS

Un don pour l'avenir, des avantages fiscaux aujourd'hui

Natasha van Bentum,
Programme des dons écologiques à
Environnement et Changement climatique
Canada

Petite question :

Quel instrument canadien de planification des dons est unique au monde, procure des avantages fiscaux exceptionnels au donateur et marquera son trentième anniversaire en 2025 ?

Si vous avez répondu le " Programme des dons écologiques " du Gouvernement du Canada, vous avez raison !

Si vous travaillez dans le domaine de la collecte de fonds et de la gestion du secteur sans but lucratif, il se peut que certains de vos sympathisants possèdent des propriétés qui comprennent un habitat faunique important, comme des forêts, des prairies et des zones humides.

Ces propriétaires jouent un rôle important dans la protection des habitats et de la faune, notamment des espèces en péril, en limitant certaines activités et pratiques et en encourageant la restauration et l'intendance.

Mais que se passe-t-il s'ils ne peuvent plus s'occuper de leur propriété, ou si leurs enfants ne sont pas intéressés par son entretien ?

Ces propriétaires peuvent également s'inquiéter des conséquences fiscales de la vente de leurs terres (comme l'impôt sur les gains en capital), ou du fait que les terres dont ils ont pris soin pendant de nombreuses années puissent être développées.

Si le terrain est considéré sensible sur le plan écologique, le Programme des dons écologiques peut vous aider.

Comment le Programme des dons écologiques peut-il aider vos partisans ?

Depuis 1995, le Programme des dons écologiques d'Environnement et Changement climatique Canada permet aux propriétaires fonciers, particuliers et entreprises, de protéger à perpétuité des terres écosensibles qui leur sont chères, en les donnant à des bénéficiaires admissibles.

Bénéficiaires admissibles de dons écologiques

Les bénéficiaires admissibles de dons écologiques comprennent : des fiducies foncières et autres organismes de conservation de bienfaisance ; les gouvernements fédéral, provinciaux et territoriaux ; les municipalités et les organ-ismes publics qui exercent une fonction gouvernementale au Canada. Une liste complète des organismes de bienfaisance environnementaux admissibles est disponible ici : <https://www.canada.ca/en/environnement-climate-change/services/environnemental-funding/ecological-gifts-program/eligible-recipients.html#toc3>. Les bénéficiaires s'assurent que les caractéristiques écologiques de la terre sont conservées à perpétuité.

Plus de 220 000 hectares protégés, évalués à plus de 1,1 milliard de dollars

Depuis 1995, plus de 1 750 dons écologiques ont été effectués, protégeant ainsi plus de 220 000 hectares de terres d'une valeur de plus de 1,1 milliard de dollars. La taille des dons peut varier de quelques hectares à des centaines d'hectares, et leur valeur de quelques milliers de dollars à des dizaines de millions.

Avantages fiscaux particuliers

Ce programme unique est rendu possible par des dispositions de la Loi de

Un don écologique est un don de terre, ou d'un intérêt ou d'un droit partiel sur une terre, à un bénéficiaire admissible. Le propriétaire foncier peut choisir de faire un don en fief simple, c'est-à-dire de faire don de la terre en entier pour assurer une protection écologique maximale et un avantage fiscal maximal. Il peut également choisir de faire don d'un intérêt partiel telle une servitude ou une convention de conservation, ce qui lui permet de conserver son lien avec la terre tout en limitant ses utilisations potentielles pour favoriser la conservation. Les dons d'intérêts résiduels dans une terre, après l'octroi d'un intérêt viager, sont également admissibles dans le cadre du Programme des dons écologiques.

GIFT PLANNING

A Legacy for Tomorrow, A Tax Break Today

Quick question:

Which Canadian gift planning vehicle is unique in the world, provides exceptional tax benefits to the donor, and will mark its thirtieth anniversary in 2025?

If you answered the “Government of Canada’s Ecological Gifts Program”, you’re correct!

If you’re in the fundraising and management realm of the nonprofit sector, some of your supporters may own property that includes significant wildlife habitat, such as forests, grasslands and wetlands.

These landowners play an important role in protecting habitats and wildlife, including species at risk, by limiting certain activities and practices, and by encouraging restoration and stewardship.

But what happens if they can no longer care for their property, or if they have children who aren’t interested in maintaining it?

Such landowners may also worry about the tax consequences of selling their land (such as capital gains tax), or that the land they’ve cared for over many years may be developed.

If the land is deemed ecologically sensitive, the Ecological Gifts Program may be able to help.

How can the Ecological Gifts Program help your supporters?

Since 1995, Environment and Climate Change Canada’s Ecological Gifts Program has enabled individual and corporate landowners to protect cherished ecologically sensitive lands in perpetuity, by donating them to qualified recipients.

Qualified recipients of ecological gifts

Qualified recipients of ecological gifts include: land trusts and other charitable conservation organizations; municipalities; federal, provincial, and territorial governments; and public bodies that perform a function of government in Canada. A complete list of qualified environmental charities can be found at <https://www.canada.ca/en/environment-climate-change/services/environmental-funding/ecological-gifts-program/eligible-recipients.html#toc3>. Recipients ensure that the land’s eco-

Over 220,000 hectares protected, valued at over $1.1 billion

Since 1995, more than 1,750 ecological gifts have been made, protecting more than 220,000 hectares of land valued at over $1.1 billion. Gifts can range in size from a few hectares to hundreds of hectares, and in value from a few thousand dollars to tens of millions.

Special income tax benefits

This unique program is made possible by provisions of the Income Tax Act of Canada, and offers significant tax benefits to landowners who donate land, or an eligible interest or right in land, to a qualified recipient.

Corporate donors deduct the amount directly, while individuals use it to calculate a nonrefundable tax credit. There is no limit to the dollar amount of ecological gift donations in a year that are eligible for the deduction or credit. In addition, any unclaimed portion of the credit may be carried forward for up to 10 years, and there is no taxable capital gain on the value of the property donated.

An ecological gift is a donation of land, or a partial interest or right in land, to an eligible recipient. The landowner may choose to make a fee simple donation, donating the land outright to provide the maximum ecological protection and largest tax benefit. Alternatively, they may choose to donate a partial interest with a conservation easement, covenant or servitude, maintaining their connection to the land while restricting its potential uses to favour conservation. Gifts of remainder interests in land, following the granting of a life interest, are also eligible under the Ecological Gifts Program.

Split receipts

In some instances, it's possible for a donor to receive cash for up to 80% of the value of the gift. The eligible amount for the tax receipt is the difference between the fair market value of the donated land and the amount of the cash advantage received by the donor.

Certification and approval

The federal Minister of the Environment:

- Certifies the ecological sensitivity of the land (in Quebec, the provincial Minister of the Environment certifies the ecological sensitivity).
- Approves the recipient receiving the Ecological Gift (for charities, municipalities and public bodies).
- Certifies the fair market value of the donation.

It's a team process – often working with allied professionals and advisors

Ecological gift donations usually involve financial advisors, land appraisers, accountants, notaries or lawyers, and other professionals who ensure that the process benefits both donors and recipient organizations.

l'impôt sur le revenu du Canada et offre des avantages fiscaux importants aux propriétaires fonciers qui font don de terres, ou d'un intérêt ou d'un droit foncier admissible, à un bénéficiaire admissible.

Les sociétés donatrices déduisent directement le montant, tandis que les particuliers l'utilisent pour calculer un crédit d'impôt non remboursable. Il n'y a pas de limite au montant annuel de dons écologiques qui sont admissibles à la déduction ou au crédit. En outre, toute partie non réclamée du crédit peut être reportée jusqu'à 10 ans, et il n'y a pas de gain en capital imposable sur la valeur du bien donné.

Reçu pour une partie du don

Dans certains cas, il est possible pour un donateur de recevoir un avantage en espèces pouvant atteindre 80 % de la valeur du don. Le montant admissible pour le reçu fiscal est la différence entre la juste valeur marchande du terrain donné et le montant de l'avantage en espèces reçu par le donateur.

Certification et approbation

Le ministre fédéral de l'Environnement :

- Certifie l'écোসensibilité de la terre (au Québec, le ministre provincial de l'Environnement certifie l'écোসensibilité).
- Approuve le bénéficiaire du don écologique (pour les organismes de bienfaisance, les municipalités et les organismes publics).
- Certifie la juste valeur marchande du don.

C'est un processus d'équipe - il faut souvent travailler en collaboration avec des professionnels et des conseillers.

Les dons écologiques font généralement appel à des conseillers financiers, à des évaluateurs fonciers, à des comptables, à des notaires ou à des avocats, ainsi qu'à d'autres professionnels qui veillent à ce que le processus profite à la fois aux donateurs et aux organismes bénéficiaires.

Women, Estate Planning, and Philanthropy: Re-Defining What's Possible

Betty-Anne Howard,
Financial Planner, Author and Speaker

As a Financial Planner, I know that estate planning (if understood at all) is often perceived as being something that only rich people do. The women I meet often don't relate to this term.

And many women also don't see themselves as philanthropists. This is a word, like estate planning, that we find it difficult to identify with. Lending a helping hand, yes! Helping out others in need, of course, that's what we do. But still, we don't see ourselves as philanthropists.

Before I was a Financial Planner, I used to teach the Psychology of Women at St. Lawrence College in Kingston. I know the words we use – like “estate planning” and “philanthropy” – inform our worldview. So the problem we have when trying to demystify the financial arena is that if we are using words that women can't relate, then we're missing a tremendous opportunity for women to share and pass on their values to the next generation.

Estate planning and philanthropy may not seem relatable or achievable to many women, and yet it is, and it can also be so much more. Planning out how you're going to transfer the wealth you have gives you power. You can leave a donation in your Will to your favourite charity for example, and make a bigger difference than you probably thought possible...not to mention the many tax benefits involved.

“You’ve got to take the first step towards a goal that seems unachievable and have the integrity and courage to believe you will reach it one day. We all have immense courage. Every one of us is capable of extraordinary things.”

~ Diana Beresford-Kroeger,

To Speak For The Trees: My Life's Journey from Ancient Celtic Wisdom to a Healing Vision of the Forest

Another way to think about estate planning

I love the above quote as it says so much in so few words. It mirrors, for many of us, our journey as we courageously set out to make a difference in our world and the lives of others.

Would you call this estate planning? Of course not, because most of us don't even know what those words mean. But estate planning can open the door to achieving extraordinary things.

Estate planning and philanthropy require a mindset shift

One definition, shared by author Sharon Hartung, says estate planning is all about “creating a deliberate and thoughtful strategy for transferring wealth. Deliberate and thoughtful because you have considered the options, determined the pros and cons, set a budget, accessed the costs, reviewed the tax implications, understood the risks, and engaged appropriate professional help.”

Although this definition begins to clarify the estate planning process, I believe there is still something missing. We could benefit from inviting our love for the communities, values, or causes we hold dear into our hearts to be a part of the process, to shift our mindset around what estate planning and philanthropy really mean.

What we have the power to achieve

Women have always made a difference in the lives of others, and have been socialized to do so. As we gain more independence and control over our finances (did you know that women will likely inherit twice in their lifetimes?) we have more interest and desire to make meaningful decisions about our estates.

The language we speak in the financial world can be intimidating, and act as a barrier to helping you make informed decisions about your money, and what will bring you joy in your life. Most of us are not aware of our choices. That's why accessible and practical information is so important to the estate and legacy planning process.

I regularly have discussions with women about how best to pass their wealth on to their families, while redirecting some of their wealth to their favorite charities rather than unknowingly giving it to the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA). If you had a choice, who would you rather see inherit a portion of your wealth – the CRA, or your favorite charities that are having an impact on the causes you care about most?

Having these conversations is the cornerstone to re-defining estate planning and making it accessible, understandable, and full of the kind of love, language, and leadership that will make a difference in the future.

Meet the Wealthy Next-Gen Donors Practising Social Justice Philanthropy

With the largest intergenerational wealth transfer ever underway, philanthropy would be wise to take heed. A recent study by the Women's Philanthropy Institute offers a snapshot of wealthy young donors, from motivations to challenges to giving behaviours. "We're at the tipping point," says one sector leader, of where to go next in engaging young donors to "become partners in systems change" and the "shifting of money and power."

"Check off which class privilege clues apply to you," prompts the website of Resource Generation, a donor network of the wealthiest (top 10%) 18-to-35-year-olds in the United States. "You have a horse. Like a real one," reads one of nearly 60 clues. "You've been on a yacht," reads another. "Heck, you OWN a yacht." It's easy to chuckle when (in the case of this writer) you fail to check off clue after clue, but the playfulness of rich kids poking fun at rich kids belies a much more serious aim: a quest to leverage privilege and resources for social change.

These kids – these millennial and Gen Z kids, dubbed everything from the Me, Me, Me Generation to millennials on steroids – think that being all right isn't right unless everyone comes along for the ride. Moving Money and Shifting Power for Social Justice: Voices of Wealthy Next-Gen Donors, a new study by the Women's Philanthropy Institute (WPI), explores how these donors practise social justice philanthropy, from motivations to challenges to giving behaviours. Anonymous interviews with current or past members of Resource Generation – the majority female, LGBTQ2S+, white, highly educated, with a net worth of at least US$1 million – reveal common ground: a desire to "dismantle systems that consolidate, maintain, and grow wealth and power" to create a more equitable world in a time of extreme, even deadly, inequality.

The philanthropic sector would be wise to take heed. The trillions of dollars next-gen donors are set to inherit (well, some of them) will lead to a "golden age of philanthropy," a Center on Wealth and Philanthropy report predicted a decade ago. In Canada, the "great wealth transfer" – the largest intergenerational transfer ever – is already under way and will total an estimated $1 trillion by 2026, with women benefiting disproportionately.

But it's not just about money. The WPI study "underscores the importance of understanding donors' identities" – nuanced, complex, and intersectional (millennials and Gen Zers are the most racially and ethnically diverse generations in Canada's history) – where gender, race, class, ethnicity, sexual orientation, and religion drive giving to social justice causes. Furthermore, how and why these donors give, distilled by the study into six core giving practices – give wholly, challenge oneself, be transparent, cede power, empower others, change systems – reflects their ultimate goal to "transform the philanthropic sector towards redistribution rather than charity."

Angela Long

Angela Long, freelance journalist and author

While Jeannie Sager, WPI's executive director, acknowledges the limits of this study (28 interviews), she sees it as a valuable indicator of how young donors approach giving and feels inspired by the participants' "intentionality." "They were willing to grapple with how to move money and shift power in ways that were really focused on creating systemic change," she says.

They want to understand "how to be fully committed to equity and wealth distribution," with a willingness to address the tensions inherent in such a pursuit.

There's no shortage of research about next-gen donors, from their tech-savvy natures to their love of impact. In a recent podcast episode, Michael Moody, co-author of Generation Impact: How Next Gen Donors Are Revolutionizing Giving, says that next-gen donors aren't content with just being the next line on a giving thermometer: "They want to grab the needle themselves and help move it." The WPI study expands on such research, providing a glimpse into the world of wealthy, individual donors. A world where "your family uses the words 'summer' and 'winter' as verbs" (Clue #27) and interviewees navigate what's described as the "core tensions" of practising social justice philanthropy within this context.

One main tension, and the subject of ongoing debate, is whether the idea of social justice philanthropy is a contradiction unto itself. The study quotes an article by MacKenzie Scott, who has given away billions to social justice causes: "We are attempting to give away a fortune that was enabled by systems in need of change." A decade ago, Peter Buffett, billionaire Warren Buffett's son, called rich people's charity "conscience laundering."

This paradox of wanting to fight wealth inequality while benefiting from class privilege isn't lost on these WPI interviewees. Networks such as Resource Generation provide a place where members can openly discuss their "money stories." A Maclean's article about Resource Movement, a Canadian offshoot of Resource Generation, says members are "cagey with outsiders," adding, "It's easy to see why – no one wants to hear how bad it feels to be rich." One of the WPI study's LGBTQ2S+ interviewees compares admitting wealth to a kind of coming out. "You have to be out about being wealthy to be in Resource Generation. Who's better at coming out than queer people?" Once "out," other obstacles arise. The effort required to give your money away – often mired in restrictive trusts and patchworks of investments all housed within a "flawed capitalist system" – causes one interviewee to describe being a philanthropist as "problematic." Others feel "paralyzed" by the "vastness of their own wealth accumulation through these flawed systems."

Overlapping identities give rise to other tensions, especially for those who feel marginalized because of race or gender. One participant says that being a woman "makes me want to empower people with other marginalized identities. But also, as a woman, philanthropy is like the one place where I do have power and control." Another participant says being from a racialized family, and "much closer to the earning of the money," rather than from multi-generational or "unearned" wealth, made them feel uncomfortable with Resource Generation's "give it all away, give more" philosophy.

How we address such tensions, especially in the context of our understanding of what social justice is and how we engage in philanthropy, continues to evolve, says Sager. From a "big view" perspective, she says, "the paradox is what makes understanding philanthropy so important and interesting, because what we get to do is examine the world through a philanthropic lens, and when you do that, you're highlighting how ethics, values, and morals are activated to address and find solutions to society's problems." The paradox may change depending on the context, she says, "but it's always going to be there." What's new, and what this report highlights, is that we seem to be "moving away from social justice as simply a theory."

The response generated by the murder of George Floyd in 2020 provides an example of this shift. WPI's Women Give 2022: Racial Justice, Gender and Generosity report notes that the graphic video of Floyd's murder "reinvigorated the U.S. racial justice movement." While that movement may be centuries old, the aftermath of May 2020 showed that philanthropy "has the power to move racial justice forward," the report says. Forty-two percent of US households were involved in or supported racial justice protests. In Canada, donations to the Black Health Alliance increased from nearly $7,000 in 2019 to more than $3 million in May 2020, a surge experienced by many other Black-led organizations (until they took a nosedive in June). CanadaHelps launched the Black Solidarity Fund.

Since 2020, the spotlight on racial justice has panned toward a discussion on how the US was really built on slavery, Sager says. Awareness of class privilege and the origins of wealth signify the beginnings of systemic change. For Sager, "social justice giving" means that everyone deserves economic, political, and social rights and opportunities, "but when you dig a little deeper, that means it's not just about the distribution of wealth, but it's also an understanding of opportunities and privileges." Asking difficult questions, challenging the infrastructure of how we raise resources, moving from a donor-centric mindset to a community-centric model, about who's being served, not who's serving – these are signs of system-level shifts.

The group of young people interviewed for the WPI study gives Sager hope for the future of philanthropy. "It's in good hands," she says. "They are actively discovering what kind of philanthropist they want to be, and they are being very deliberate and thoughtful about it," understanding themselves as "resource activists," she adds.

Paulette Senior, executive director of the Canadian Women's Foundation (CWF), hopes the WPI findings indicate what's to come generationally: "Our hope is always in the younger generations, but this report speaks to what we've been talking about over the past two years in terms of the need to look at philanthropy through a different lens."

These young donors' lenses seem crystal clear. The tensions examined in the report indicate an "awareness and a recognition," says Senior. A recognition of "knowing the roots of money, and where your money came from, and how you get your money is an important part of the work around justice and equity," she says. When it comes to class privilege and wealth, "a lot of folks would prefer to just close their eyes and go through the world, but this is eyes wide open."

While there are donors who understand and acknowledge class privilege and wealth, generationally speaking this is something new, Senior says. "This generation is giving with greater understanding, education, as well as understanding there's a systemic piece to this." They're moving and shifting money, she says, aware "that money and power are inextricably related."

How we define social justice philanthropy shapes how it's practised. Senior's definition includes understanding that organizations doing the work around social justice require money and resources, and also making an effort to understand the issues and be clear about what it is you're trying to do, and doing that consistently. "A one-time gift does not change the world," she says – "unless it's Elon Musk's. That could probably wipe out hunger." Social justice philanthropy is also about caring, she says. You care about people and communities, "that others are doing well."

The idea of collectivity fuels putting this community-minded spirit into practice. Senior quotes CWF founder Rosemary Brown: "Until all of us have made it, none of us have made it." She talks of the South African philosophy of ubuntu: imbued with the idea that "your success is tied to my success." "That's where we're looking in terms of understanding the power of philanthropy," she says. A kind of philanthropy that shifts away from a one-size-fits-all approach, indicating an understanding of different impacts on different people, of intersectionality.

The Center for Intersectional Justice writes about the importance of understanding intersectionality in terms of social justice. Once we acknowledge privilege, we can use "our own complex positionalities in the various networks we move in" toward the "dis-mantling of the intersectional system of racism." All forms of systemic inequality are interconnected, they note: "Only when they are addressed simultaneously can we achieve long-lasting progress."

From addressing core tensions, to next-gen donors' giving practices, the WPI research "reinforces a lot of our focus where we go next with our work," Senior says. CWF's principles surrounding feminist philanthropy – ceding power, empowering others – speaks the language of systems change. "We're at the tipping point," Senior says, of where to go next in engaging young donors to "become partners in systems change" and the "shifting of money and power." Conversations surrounding gender and equity, diversity and inclusion, as well as social justice – sparked by the COVID-19 pandemic and the murder of George Floyd – are becoming commonplace in Canada, she says. Even terms such as "intersectionality." More and more people are "actually speaking this language," Senior says, adding that it used to be "kind of lonely out there in the desert."

What's important is to keep these conversations going. In the past, Senior says, "we've seen where language just becomes words and not action." She has seen what happens when words do become action. In both her work at CWF and past work with front-line organizations, "I've witnessed people's lives being transformed, witnessed them being able to end poverty in their lives for good, and for generations to come," she says. "I don't think this is impossible work. It takes a long time, but I don't think it's impossible. It's possible to end poverty, to end homelessness, to end gender-based violence. It's absolutely possible."

If there is any hope at all, many are placing bets on the kids, "a generation of people who believe life can and should be better," writes one Forbes author. Maybe "your family owns a lot of monogrammed stuff – mostly in cursive" (Clue #23), but rather than focus on the contradiction of practising social justice philanthropy from a place of privilege, Senior prefers to focus on the choice to take action. The tensions faced by the WPI study's interviewees are by no means new, she says, "but it's how you act despite them – despite the class privilege, despite the systemic barriers, despite the power structures that exist, that are exclusive – they're still acting, they're still doing something. And we can only build on that."

How the Canadian Centre For Christian Charities is Using AI as a Writing Assistant

Introduction

This article explores the Canadian Centre for Christian Charities' (CCCC) journey with generative AI—the various software applications that generate words, code, and analysis. Most of our research is still underway, so we are forthright about our concerns. We freely share with you our self-imposed limitations when using OpenAI's ChatGPT and other third-party applications powered by AI. However, we also share our optimism about its potential to help craft better communications and work more efficiently. Finally, we suggest several experiments people on both sides of the philanthropy equation can try as they learn about ChatGPT and other generative AI.

How CCCC got started with AI

CCCC's programs are diverse and many. They include an accreditation program, a pension program, a benefits program, a help desk, and resources aimed at helping our 3000+ members navigate operational and regulatory complexity. CCCC's wide variety of programs generate a lot of documents! So, earlier this year, when rumours of ChatGPT started buzzing, we decided to explore its potential benefits. Presently, only two of our departments use AI as a writing assistant. Our marketing department uses it to generate copy for channels like email and social media while our publications department is using it to generate document summaries, outlines, drafts, and for copyediting. This is a fraction of the possible applications for AI, ranging from minute-taking to financial analysis.

AI as a writing assistant for marketing communications

CCCC's journey with generative AI began in our marketing communications department. In this digital age, crafting the right message and delivering it to the right audience at the right time can be a daunting task. Larger charities have teams of people with specialized skill sets to manage print, digital, and social media. Smaller charities limit themselves to one or two methods of communication, such as a website, an email newsletter, or a Facebook account. CCCC is in the middle. We have big communication needs but a small team. So, we rely on our tools, and AI was an emerging tool we wanted to explore.

The first AI tools CCCC encountered were add-ons to programs we already use. While all of us were in the thick of the pandemic, many existing software companies were quietly experimenting with AI. CCCC was invited to test beta versions of note-taking assistants, image generators, and transcribers that were add-ons to tools we already used. The few trials we tried didn't work well. They were a novelty. But, when Copy.ai arrived, writers took notice en masse (Daso 2021). In early 2022, we started using Copy.ai to optimize the content for our emails and social media posts. Our Head of Marketing &

and Publications

Communications is still responsible for the quality of everything that goes out, but the process of managing various outlines, drafts, revisions, and approvals is sped up. This is because Copy.ai was one of the first reliable applications of AI that was easy to implement in our workflows. The interface helps non-technical people create instructions (prompts) for the AI, removing the need to learn how generative AI works. It was a quick decision because it enabled our Department Head to spend more time managing communications and less time writing drafts.

Generative AI tools spread quickly through the marketing world for two reasons. First, chatbots are designed for engaging communications—they work very well for SEO, ad copy, and social media. Second, people in marketing communications already know what they're looking for—they already know how to write and how to identify effective writing. Copy.ai was one of the first to work, but now there are many (G2 2023).

This remains the most common way people use AI. They keep using the tools they already know, but choose to add in the functionality of AI as it becomes available. For readers who are just getting started with generative AI, we'd recommend you start with a trial of a third-party application.

Identifying other uses for generative AI

By February 2023, over 100 million people had signed up for ChatGPT, and 13 million people were using it on a daily basis (Hu 2023). People were learning to write their own prompts, and using it to write first drafts of novels, computer code, instruction sets, poems, and help desk articles. AI had forced itself into my world, but for AI to be useful, it must be reliable, keep information safe, and produce a consistent product. I decided to start learning through experimentation.

Selecting source material to work with

Our team is familiar with documents like the Registered Charity Information Return T4033; Clergy Residence Deduction T1223; and how to draft the purposes for a charity GC-019. These documents are in the public domain and ChatGPT is already familiar with them. Since our team knows and already uses these guidance documents, they seemed a natural choice of source material to use for experiments.

Selecting a real-world problem to solve

CCCC is a mid-sized charity with a diverse team of professionals in HR, marketing, IT, legal, accounting and communications. While our team is unified by our support for Christian charities, our team members often find themselves speaking different professional dialects and working with methodologies learned through their training. A common way this reveals itself is when we create documents. As the person responsible for managing CCCC's knowledge base, one challenge is determining where one professional world should end and where another should take over in our resource and document development.

My real-world problem and related research question was, "Can ChatGPT help identify, and make more efficient, the process of creating training and guidance documents, while retaining the authoritative writing requirements of various professions?" This is what I discovered through my research so far.

Privacy and legal considerations when working with ChatGPT

ChatGPT exists to become better

ChatGPT is a grand experiment with broad terms of service. Its goal is to become better, not to deliver a particular level of service within a particular jurisdiction. From OpenAI's perspective, the information people enter into ChatGPT is primarily used to help train the software. This means that if people enter enough trade secrets or proprietary methodologies as part of their prompts, ChatGPT will eventually recognize them and be able to replicate them. For example, if you ask, ChatGPT can write in the style of William Shakespeare or Christopher Walken, because enough of their work is publicly available.

Currently, several provinces and the Government of Canada have a joint investigation into OpenAI. They want to ensure that OpenAI is gaining adequate consent for the collection, use, and disclosure of the information entered into the software (Office of the Privacy Commissioner, 2023). This is good governance. The current state of generative AI is very similar to the early days of Uber, which did not differ from getting into a car with a stranger unregulated, and really only designed to see if ride-sharing would work. It did, and now using Uber is a commonly used, regulated service. But the methods, rules, regulations, and boundaries of ride-sharing evolved; all as the service grew. It was messy, and for now, so is AI (Taratino and Walters 2023).

Because we understand it's still an experiment, we've constrained our information to a few subject areas we know well. By constraining our dataset, we've been able to focus on processes, consistency, and outcomes. To extend the Uber analogy, we've tried taking it to work once or twice a week. We haven't sold our car and given up our driver's license.

AI can help make decisions, but you need to disclose how you use it

Canada is developing a set of rules to govern the creation and use of emerging forms of AI. It's called the Artificial Intelligence Development and Application Act (AIDA). At this point, the forms of AI governed by AIDA aren't clearly defined. But they will include AI that can potentially harm people's health and safety, or violate their human rights, whether on purpose or by accident. The rules will also consider whether the system disadvantages certain groups of people or if there are already other laws that address the risks it poses. AIDA will also govern AI systems that can process data about human activities and generate content or make decisions, predictions, or recommendations (Lucarini and Walters, 2023).

The AIDA will be particularly important to granting organizations that use AI to set funding priorities, allocate budgets, and evaluate proposals. Note that AIDA will have requirements for risk management, record keeping, notification, and transparency. There will also be penalties for noncompliance.

Suggestions to help you experiment with AI

Buy the paid version

OpenAI encourages people to use the latest version of the software, which is GPT-4, and it is only available through a paid subscription. When you start a new chat, the free version has only 2000-5000 words to use between your question and the answer it generates. If your question is long or it contains a document, the answer is often truncated and must be generated through a series of continuations. With GPT-4, you can analyze documents of 12,000 words and still have answers of equal length, and the current 25,000 envelope seems to be expanding as the product develops. For an excellent summary of GPT-4's full specifications, I would encourage you to read Mohammed Lubbad's comprehensive article in Medium.com (Lubbad, 2023).

Watch videos until they start to become redundant

There are hundreds of excellent tutorials on YouTube about how to get started with any version of ChatGPT. In fact, there's more than usual because GPT can be used to write outlines and scripts for instructional videos! There's been a flood of people creating videos that all seem the same and it is helpful to watch videos until they become redundant. Then start searching for videos on specific skills.

If you find you're not interested in learning how to prompt ChatGPT, be assured there are thousands of skilled tech professionals building new GPT powered start-ups. Every knowledge-based industry, including the RFP software developers, is seeking ways to make using generative AI easier. Keep your eye out for new easy-to-use apps that meet your needs or ask the software providers you already use if they are building an add-on feature. Currently, almost a dozen programs we use at CCCC have beta or active AI functionality.

For those who prefer to read, OpenAI has a helpful starter's guide written by Jessica Shieh called Best practices for prompt engineering with OpenAI API.

Create a prompt library

Creating a prompt library is helpful if you want consistent and reliable results from GPT-4. You can organize them by function or document type. Prompts can be used for analysis, comparison, revision, copyediting and idea generation. They can be gathered or varied through experimentation, from articles and videos that teach you how to accomplish specific tasks, or even by asking ChatGPT for suggestions about how to get the results you want.

As you use them, you can improve them. This will save time and help you track progress as you continue experimenting. It also helps you adjust your work as ChatGPT evolves over time. A prompt used a month ago will yield a different result today, so it's helpful to know how it worked last time. Keeping records can improve your work over time.

Examples of experiments

In this final section, I provide three examples of experiments I ran to help me see if ChatGPT could help me break out mundane writing tasks from CCCC documents so that our professionals could focus on more high-value writing. Then, I provide three experiments for grant makers and three for grant writers. Each experiment has a title, an explanation of the expected end-result, and a suggested prompt you can put into any version of ChatGPT. I encourage you to try them.

CCCC documentation experiments

Identify the instructions and steps within a document.

Government documents often conflate definitions, suggestions, and steps. They also tend to run off on rabbit trails, trying to address every possible scenario for every possible charity. It is a time-consuming task to read, understand, and break out ordered steps when a list is not already provided. To save our professionals' time, I used this prompt on government documents and forms to identify instructions and steps within a document. Our professionals only need to validate or improve the list.

Suggested prompt: "This is text from a government form. Please analyze the information and rewrite it as a series of steps. Name each step. ### {paste text here} ###."

Create a glossary from a document

Government documents often have technical or legal terms. Some are defined, but many aren't. This can be particularly difficult for new Canadians or lay people in volunteer roles. While glossaries do exist, it is tedious to ask experienced professionals to locate or write glossary definitions. I used this prompt on government documents and forms to identify important terms. Our professionals only need to validate or improve the definitions.

Suggested prompt: "This is text from a government form. Please analyze the information and identify important terms. Write glossary definitions for each term using this format:

Name of Term

Glossary Definition

Example

Create a learning module outline from a document

This is a more complex prompt. It explains what GPT is reviewing, what it should do, and sets an order for the results. For this example, I've used Section D of T4033 as my target document. I would then paste the text into the correct location in the prompt. I've used this prompt to help me create outlines for resource manuals. I've also compared and contrasted the results of these prompts to our existing resources, looking for ways we can improve. This level of analysis helps us plan our writing and revisions.

Suggested prompt: "This is the text from Section D of the T3010. Please create the outline for a learning module that will help a person complete Section D.

- Include headings
- Write an introduction paragraph for each heading
- Identify important terms
- Write an introduction and conclusion for the whole module
- Write an example exercise for the whole module that includes financial figures ### {paste text here} ###."

Experiments for grant reviewers and program managers

Create grant evaluation criteria for a range of ages and geographical regions.

The criteria for evaluating grant applications can vary based on the specifics of the project. With GPT-4, grant evaluators can create a customizable and comprehensive set of evaluation criteria that can be tailored to each unique grant application.

Suggested prompt: "Create a set of evaluation criteria for a grant application for a community arts initiative focusing on youth engagement. The evaluation criteria should consider age ranges (e.g., early childhood, adolescence, young adulthood) and geographical regions (e.g., urban, rural, suburban) to ensure inclusivity and relevance to diverse youth populations."

• • •

Create a list of questions for grant applicants that request program data and long form answers

When reviewing grant applications, it's crucial to ask applicants the right questions to gather additional information or clarify certain aspects. GPT-4 can be used to generate a list of relevant questions based on the contents of the application.

Suggested prompt: "Generate a list of open-ended questions for a grant applicant proposing a project to provide clean drinking water in a remote community. The questions should solicit detailed information, including specific numerical or financial data, to better understand the project's budget, cost estimates, funding sources, and sustainability plans. Number each question and group questions under headings."

Reviewing and providing feedback on grant applications

For those who review grant applications, GPT-4 can be a useful tool for generating detailed and constructive feedback. By providing the AI with key aspects to consider (such as clarity, relevance, and feasibility), grant evaluators can automate the initial review process and focus on more nuanced considerations.

Suggested prompt: “Review a grant application that seeks to improve literacy rates in rural areas. Focus on clarity, relevance to the community, and feasibility of the proposed solutions. Create headings for each section.”

Experiments for grant writers to various grant programs

Arts program stressing cultural diversity and inclusion in a metro area

This prompt helps focus GPT on an arts grant for cultural diversity and social inclusion in a metropolitan area. The result should highlight the importance of engaging underrepresented communities, fostering collaboration among diverse artists, and emphasizing the potential impact on local cultural heritage. This would create an initial draft that a writer could improve.

Suggested prompt: “Develop a grant proposal for an arts program that aims to promote cultural diversity and social inclusion in [city name] metropolitan area. Emphasize the program’s ability to engage underrepresented communities, foster collaboration among diverse artists, and highlight the potential impact on local cultural heritage. ### {paste program report here} ###.”

• • •

Science scholarship grant

This prompt will create a first draft for a science scholarship grant. Grant writers should also be able to add supplementary material such as a transcript or student’s CV. The proposal will focus on promoting equity and diversity in STEM fields by showcasing their program’s ability to support talented students from underrepresented communities and empower them to pursue science careers.

Suggested prompt: “Create a grant proposal for a science scholarship program targeting high-achieving students with a particular interest in biology. Focus on the importance of fostering scientific curiosity, providing mentorship opportunities, and addressing barriers to access in science education to promote equity and diversity in STEM fields. ### {add CV here} ###”

• • •

Operational grant for a building

This is a prompt for a general operational grant. It focuses the writer’s attention on the benefits of the building rather than the need of the organization. It gives the writer placeholders where they can insert operational figures and discuss variances. It is a good first draft.

Suggested prompt: “Prepare a grant proposal for an operational grant to support the maintenance and sustainability of a community center building. Outline the building’s role as a hub for social services, education, and recreational activities, and demonstrate how the grant will ensure efficient facility management, promote energy efficiency, and improve accessibility for diverse community members.”

Conclusion

As we conclude, you may be wondering if we used AI to help write this article. Yes, absolutely. We used GPT to create an initial outline, and to do the first drafts of the experiments that were not developed by CCCC. We used it to generate ideas or options on how the article could go. Then we selected the options that worked best. We used it to have chats about some of the resources we reference, and GPT’s responses influenced our thinking. We used it to proof-read and copyedit the article, and often it provided clearer ways of saying things. We could not use GPT-4 for primary research as most of this article is based on personal experience. Ultimately, every paragraph in this article had to be written, edited, reviewed, and approved by a human. The real benefit is that we were able to do all this a bit faster using AI.

The path to a safe, secure, and reliable integration of AI into CCCC’s workflows will be a long journey. We are having some success using it to analyze documents, create lists, write glossary terms, and identify ways we can improve. In the long run, it is likely that we will leave the prompt engineering up to third-party apps and only use GPT-4 for specific analysis tasks.

ESTATE PLANNING

How a Donation in Your Will Can Benefit You AND Your Family

The idea of leaving a charitable gift in your Will might have you wondering: why would I leave a gift to charity in my Will when I have my family to take care of?

Fair question! No one wants to leave their children, grandchildren and other loved ones without enough resources to sustain themselves. We all want to make sure that we've done what we can to help our loved ones thrive after we're gone.

Of course, you'll want to name your nearest and dearest as beneficiaries in your Will, and have peace of mind that they're getting the bulk of your estate. But what if you could do 'better' with your Will? If you knew you could leave a meaningful contribution to your cause, while still supporting your family, wouldn't that be the best of all worlds?

Think about it in terms of percentages

It doesn't have to be a binary choice. You can support your family and the causes you care about. Think about what a small percentage of your estate left to charity would look like, while still leaving the majority for loved ones.

Let's say your estate – your property, any unused savings, etc. – is worth $650,000. Just five percent to charity would be $32,500. Imagine what you could accomplish with a donation of that size! And there's still 95% of your estate for children and grandchildren.

Don't forget the tax benefits!

Your estate is likely going to be hit with one big tax bill when you pass. You might think that these taxes are inevitable. In reality, you have a choice. You can instead redirect funds that would have otherwise been paid in taxes to a charity.

Put another way, when you leave a gift in your Will to charity, your estate will get a charitable tax credit that can help pay down that big tax bill.

Let's take that same estate of $650,000. If you wanted to leave 5% of your estate to charity — a $32,500 donation — your estate would get about a 2.5% reduction in taxes — equivalent to $16,250.

Speak to an advisor who can help you maximize the benefits of your charitable giving. You can find a list of financial advisors with expertise in charitable tax planning on our website (will-power.ca). Many of them offer free consultations.

A beautiful legacy for family to rally around

Taking care of family is about more than making sure they have the financial resources they need. How will they feel after you're gone, and is there something you can do to help ease the pain of your passing?

A charitable gift in your Will can be a beacon of positivity during a difficult time for your loved ones. It can be something that they rally around, and use to celebrate your life and for what you stood.

It can also be the start of a legacy that inspires your children, grandchildren, and future generations to give back to the world around them.

It's up to you to shape the legacy you want. But armed with the knowledge that you can support your family, support your cause, and the benefits of doing both, what decision will you take?

Visit the Will Power campaign at will-power.ca to learn more and get help taking your next steps towards leaving a charitable gift in your Will.

Will Power is a national public education campaign designed to inspire Canadians to think differently about charitable giving and empower them to create positive change through their Wills. Will Power is spearheaded by the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) and the CAGP Foundation, collaborating with charities and advisors from across Canada to raise the level of charitable gifts through Wills and generate $58-billion for important causes in this country.

NOTE 1:

Most organizations are categorized by their primary activity. Some appear in more than one category when their activities are extremely varied in nature.

Please refer to "Purpose" in the main listing for more information on the activities of a specific organization.

NOTE 2:

Many organizations with Revenue Canada Charitable Registration Numbers are not active fundraisers or are supported mainly by their respective members.

The following list illustrates the kind of organizations that are less likely to appear in the Donor's Guide.

- Government departments and agencies
- Public schools and their boards
- Professional and industrial associations
- Community service clubs

Additionally, where there are many local, regional and national bodies related in some way and/or are all concerned with the same work, local organizations have generally not been included separately. It is suggested that you contact the appropriate regional or national office of such multi-branch organizations to locate a particular, local group of interest to you.

NOTE 1:

La majorité des organismes sont classés par leur activité principale. Certains organismes apparaissent dans plus d'une catégorie lorsque leurs activités sont de nature très différentes.

Pour plus d'informations sur les activités d'un organisme, se reporter à « But » dans la liste principale.

NOTE 2:

Plusieurs organismes avec un numéro d'enregistrement de charité à Revenu Canada ne collectent pas de fonds de façon active ou sont supportés principalement par leurs membres respectifs.

La liste suivante présente les types d'organismes qui n'apparaissent que très peu dans le guide:

- Départements et agences gouvernementaux
- Ecoles publiques et leurs conseils d'administration
- Associations professionnelles et industrielles
- Clubs de services communautaires

De plus, comme il y a plusieurs organismes locaux, régionaux et nationaux connexes et/ou qui sont intéressés par le même travail, les organismes locaux ne sont généralement pas inclus dans le guide. Nous vous suggérons de contacter le bureau régional ou national de l'organisme désiré afin de trouver un groupe local particulier.

Purpose: Alberta Guide Dogs is a registered charity that breeds, raises and trains Guide Dogs for individuals who are blind/visually-impaired, Autism Service Dogs for children with profound autism, and PTSD Service Dogs for Veterans and First Responders living in Alberta. Guide and Service Dogs increase independence, mobility, safety, confidence and support. These dogs are provided to clients FREE OF CHARGE. The organization relies on the generosity of donors to cover the $35,000 cost to produce each professionally-trained dog.

"You cannot get through a single day without having an impact on the world around you. What you do makes a difference, and you have to decide what kind of difference you want to make."

— Jane Goodall

Give

A LEGACY OF PROTECTING HUMAN RIGHTS

A voice for the silenced. A champion for the vulnerable. A protector of human rights for generations to come. That's the kind of difference your clients can make when they choose to become Human Rights Guardians.

By leaving a gift in their Will to Amnesty International or naming us as an insurance policy beneficiary, your clients can help ensure that the world their children and grandchildren inherit is one where everyone is treated equally and with dignity.

No d'enregistrement d'organisme de bienfaisance : 13196 9628 RR0001

But: Fondée en 1918, l'Association des Amputés de guerre offre des programmes en constante évolution. D'abord vouée aux anciens combattants amputés, elle aide aujourd'hui l'ensemble des personnes amputées, y compris les enfants. En faisant un don testamentaire, vous perpétuez l'oeuvre des amputés de guerre et financez nos programmes essentiels destinés aux personnes amputées à travers le pays. Le Programme LES VAINQUEURS, notamment, procure aux enfants amputés une aide diversifiée, dont de l'aide financière pour leurs membres artificiels, afin qu'ils puissent mener une vie active et autonome. Grâce à votre appui, les programmes de l'association poursuivront leur essor. L'organisme ne reçoit aucune subvention gouvernementale.

Purpose: BC & Alberta Guide Dogs is a registered charity that breeds, raises and trains Guide Dogs for individuals who are blind/visually-impaired, Autism Service Dogs for children with profound autism, and PTSD Service Dogs for Veterans and First Responders living in British Columbia and Alberta. These professionally-trained Guide and Service Dogs increase independence, mobility, safety, confidence and support. These dogs are provided to clients FREE OF CHARGE. The organization relies on the generosity of donors to cover the $35,000 cost to produce each certified dog.

Purpose: For over 30 years, Brown Bagging for Calgary's Kids has provided food to youth who do not arrive at school with the food they need to succeed. We are currently supplying lunches to more than 6,000 students each school day in over 230 schools across Calgary. Over the past year, we have also expanded our impact to support kids and families outside of school. Our vision is a future where communities ensure no kids go hungry; our mission is to inspire people to take meaningful action to feed and care for kids.

Know Your Client's Gladue Rights

If your client identifies as Indigenous and is being charged with a crime, Gladue principles must be applied in court. In many cases, your client may not know about their Gladue rights.

The Canadian Bar Association has developed tools for you and your clients. A learning program and resources that examine the overrepresentation of Indigenous peoples in the criminal legal system and Gladue principles.

If you have already completed another version of The Path through a law society or other organization and wish to access the CBA's new module Indigenous Peoples and the Criminal Legal System, you can.

Purpose: Canadian Blood Services is a not-for-profit charitable organization. We are responsible for operating an accessible, reliable and sustainable system of life essentials for transfusion and transplantation on behalf of all provincial and territorial governments, excluding Quebec. As a registered charity, we rely on the generosity of financial donors to help us do more to serve patients by strengthening our national programs for blood, plasma, stem cells and organs and tissue donations and to help fuel research and innovation. Financial donors play an integral role in connecting patients with the blood products they need where and when they need them most. Together with our supporters we will help every patient, match every need and serve every Canadian.

Generosity

Looking for a smarter way to give?

Or are you a fundraiser or a professional that serves donors?

Sophisticated donors can simplify an existing family foundation, donate securities in-kind, or establish a Donor-Advised Fund to easily support registered Canadian charities through CCCC's Community Trust Fund (CTF).

Additionally, generous business owners have an effortless way to support their corporate giving and community engagement strategy with the CTF. Leverage your high-impact donation today and help charities thrive!

EDUCATION CHANGES EVERYTHING

Children Believe has been working globally for 60+ years, breaking barriers to education and empowering children to dream fearlessly, stand up for what they believe in — and be heard.

By leaving a gift in your Will* to Children Believe, you'll lay the foundation for the next generation of children to solve some of the world's biggest problems!

*We encourage you to speak to a lawyer or financial advisor and your loved ones as you plan your estate.

Purpose: Children's Hospital Foundation of Manitoba is dedicated to ensuring that every child treated at HSC Winnipeg Children's Hospital has the best care and experience possible. Since 1971, with incredible donor support, the Foundation has raised more than $165 million to help sick and injured children from Manitoba, Northwestern Ontario, and Nunavut. Funds support important programs that bring comfort to sick children, life-saving equipment, and health research to improve the lives of children everywhere.

Give to a better future

Your bequest today can change someone else's tomorrow

When someone loses their sight, their life can change in many ways. They may have to give up their job or turn over their driver's license. They'll have to learn to adapt to doing everyday tasks without the help of sight. And they'll need to come to terms with the emotional challenges of sight loss as sunshine, colours, and the faces of their loved ones begin to fade from view. You can help.

By making a gift in your will to the CNIB Foundation, you'll ensure people in your community have the support they need to move forward with confidence after losing their sight, and continue to live the lives they choose.

Purpose: Celebrating 100 years in 2018, the CNIB Foundation is a non-profit organization driven to change what it is to be blind today. We deliver innovative programs and powerful advocacy that empower people impacted by blindness to live their dream and tear down barriers to inclusion. Our work as a blind foundation is powered by a network of volunteers, donors and partners from coast to coast to coast. To learn more or get involved, visit cnib.ca

METTEZ VOTRE PASSION AU CŒUR DE VOTRE HÉRITAGE

Votre passion pour les espaces naturels qui nous entourent est au cœur de votre vie. Et maintenant, vous pouvez en faire votre héritage. Un don testamentaire à Conservation de la nature Canada, quel que soit le montant, vous permet de contribuer à la protection de nos habitats les plus vulnérables et de la faune qu'ils abritent. Pour aujourd'hui, pour demain, et pour les générations à venir.

Leave a legacy of hope for youth experiencing homelessness

Since 1982, Covenant House Toronto has supported more than 100,000 youth to ignite their potential and reclaim their lives. As Canada's largest agency serving youth who are homeless, trafficked or at risk, we offer the widest range of services to support hundreds of young people that walk through our doors every day.

More than a place to stay, Covenant House Toronto provides life-changing care with unconditional love and respect. We offer housing options, health and well-being support, training and skills development and ongoing care once youth move into the community.

A gift in your Will ensures we can continue helping young people by providing them with a safe space to heal, grow and move forward towards a better future. It is a simple and powerful way to make a significant impact while offering financial benefits to you and your family.

But: La Croix-Rouge canadienne est l'une des plus grandes organisations humanitaires au Canada. Elle contribue à renforcer la résilience et à favoriser le rétablissement des communautés pendant et après des catastrophes naturelles, des conflits et des épidémies. Depuis plus de 125 ans, grâce au soutien essentiel des donatrices et donateurs canadiens et à la compassion de milliers de bénévoles dûment formés, la Croix-Rouge canadienne offre des secours, de l'aide et du soutien afin de sauver des vies. L'organisation travaille également avec des partenaires locaux pour prodiguer des soins essentiels à des personnes blessées, malades ou touchées par des situations d'urgence. Nos soins et nos services novateurs visent à soulager la souffrance humaine.

"What is the use of living if it be not to strive for noble causes and to make this muddled world a better place for those who will live in it after we are gone?"

But: Bruyère est un organisme de soins de santé universitaire comprenant quatre campus, qui maximise la qualité de vie de ses usagers et les aide à retourner vivre à la maison et à y rester. On y offre un vaste éventail de services dans les domaines du vieillissement, de la réadaptation, des soins médicaux complexes, des soins palliatifs, des soins primaires et en milieu résidentiel. La recherche que nous y menons mène à une innovation constante qui profite aux services que nous offrons et dont l'accent est mis sur la prestation de soins visant le regain de l'autonomie. Ce travail est renforcé par la Fondation Bruyère, qui fait connaître notre histoire et recueille des fonds grâce au soutien de nos généreux concitoyens.

But: La Fondation INCA qui a fêté ses 100 ans d'existence en 2018 est un organisme sans but lucratif qui vise à changer ce que cela veut dire que d'être aveugle. Nous fournissons des programmes innovateurs et des initiatives de défense des droits qui amènent les personnes touchées par la cécité à réaliser leurs rêves en éliminant les barrières pour favoriser l'inclusion. Notre action est alimentée par un réseau de bénévoles, de donateurs et de partenaires d'un océan à l'autre. Pour en savoir plus ou pour participer, visitez le site inca.ca.

Donnez pour un avenir meilleur

Votre legs aujourd'hui
peut changer l'avenir
de quelqu'un d'autre
demain.

Lorsqu'une personne perd la vue, sa vie peut changer à bien des égards. Elle peut être obligée d'abandonner son emploi ou de rendre son permis de conduire. Elle devra apprendre à s'adapter aux tâches quotidiennes sans l'aide de la vue. Et elle devra faire face aux défis émotionnels de la perte de vision, alors que le soleil, les couleurs et les visages de ses proches commencent à disparaître. Vous pouvez aider.

En faisant un don par testament à la Fondation INCA, vous vous assurez que les personnes de votre collectivité bénéficient du soutien dont elles ont besoin pour aller de l'avant avec confiance après avoir perdu la vue et continuer à vivre la vie qu'elles ont choisie.

Appelez Cindi Meyer,
directrice des

(poste 7470) ou

envoyez un courriel à cindi.meyer@inca.ca pour en savoir plus sur la façon de créer un don dans votre testament.

UN LEGS QUI A DU SENS

Les hommes, femmes et enfants qui ont été contraints de quitter leur foyer ont déployé des efforts extraordinaires pour survivre. Tant qu'il y aura des personnes déracinées dans le monde, le HCR, l'Agence des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés, continuera à répondre à l'appel pour apporter son soutien aux millions de réfugiés, de personnes déplacées de force et d'apatrides, que ce soit aujourd'hui, demain ou dans les années à venir.

Avec un don testamentaire en faveur du HCR, votre générosité peut permettre de fournir des services et des biens essentiels à celles et ceux qui en ont besoin de toute urgence, quel que soit l'endroit où se produit une crise.

Contactez Kudzai Riva, Directrice des dons planifiés, à rivak@unhcr.org ou au 416 926-7974 pour en savoir plus sur l'incidence des dons par testament.

CAGP WORKS FOR YOU

CAGP is the only Canadian professional association that brings together professional advisors with fundraisers to learn, collaborate and network.

FOR PROFESSIONAL ADVISORS

Philanthropy is good for business. It is the glue that binds client's loyalty to you by extending financial success to social significance. CAGP helps you improve your value to clients through advanced philanthropic planning advice.

FOR FUNDRAISING & FINANCE STAFF AT CHARITIES

As fundraising gets more engaged in financial, tax and estate planning, ensure your fundraising and finance team are trained in the most current strategies, trends and changes to charity law.

FOR SENIOR DECISION MAKERS

Our best-in-class educational offerings will help you better understand how to initiate and manage a strategic fundraising program. Connect with other senior leaders, fundraisers and professional advisors with our network of Chapters across Canada.

Membership in CAGP brings a suite of tangible assets, tools and products that make membership in CAGP a modest investment with real value.

Connaître les droits découlant du principe de Gladue

Si votre client s'identifie comme autochtone et est accusé d'un crime, les principes de Gladue doivent être appliqués au tribunal. Dans la plupart des cas, votre client pourrait ne pas connaître ses droits selon les principes de l'arrêt Gladue.

L'Association du Barreau canadien a développé des outils pour vous et vos clients. Un programme d'apprentissage et des ressources qui portent sur la surreprésentation des peuples autochtones dans le système de justice pénale et les principes de Gladue.

Si vous avez déjà suivi une version antérieure de la formation Le parcours par l'intermédiaire d'un barreau ou d'une autre organisation et que vous souhaitez accéder au nouveau module de l'ABC intitulé « Les peuples autochtones et le système de justice pénale », vous le pouvez.

Suivez la formation « Le parcours », et apprenez comment appliquer les principes de l'arrêt Gladue.

Organisme de bienfaisance no 89064 8249 RR0001

But: Mercy Ships Canada a réfléchi à la question de l'héritage et investi dans l'avenir des soins de santé. Mercy Ships déploie ses navires hôpitaux dirigés par des bénévoles qualifiés pour fournir des opérations chirurgicales de première classe, renforcer les capacités médicales et favoriser le développement durable des pays ayant un accès limité aux soins chirurgicaux. Ses programmes apportent un soutien global aux pays qui s'efforcent de rendre les soins de santé accessibles à tous. Mercy Ships utilise le navire hôpital civil le plus grand au monde, le Global Mercy, ainsi que le Africa Mercy.

Purpose: Mercy Ships Canada has reflected on the question of legacy and is investing in the future of healthcare. Mercy Ships deploys its hospital ships run by skilled volunteers to provide first-class surgical operations, build medical capacity, and foster sustainable development in countries with limited access to surgical care. Its programs provide comprehensive support to countries in Africa striving to make health care accessible to all. Mercy Ships operates the largest purpose-built, civilian hospital ship in the world, The Global Mercy, as well as The Africa Mercy.

Purpose: Located in East Toronto, Michael Garron Hospital provides high-quality healthcare to one of the most diverse areas in Canada. Our hospital provides care and compassion at some of life's most crucial moments, from welcoming a new baby to offering dignity at the end-of-life. Everyone who comes through our doors is treated like a neighbour. Because to us, they are. Philanthropy helps us ensure the health and well-being of 400,000 people in our community, as well as its surrounding areas.

LET YOUR PASSION DEFINE YOUR LEGACY

Your passion for Canada's natural spaces defines your life; now it can define your legacy. With a gift in your Will to the Nature Conservancy of Canada, no matter the size, you can help protect our most vulnerable habitats and the wildlife that call them home. For today, for tomorrow and for generations to come.

TEPs are full members of the Society of Trust and Estate Practitioners (STEP). STEP members are highly knowledgeable in offering domestic and international advice on trusts and estates, including planning, administration, and related tax issues. They help families plan for their futures, providing expert level guidance when it comes to making significant life decisions. Clients turn to STEP members for direction following the death of a partner; ensuring elderly and vulnerable relatives are cared for; safely passing a family business from one generation to the next; and helping clients to support charitable causes in an effective way.

You can talk to a TEP.

Purpose: Scott Mission is one of Toronto's longest-serving social service agencies - serving the city's homeless and low-income individuals and families. The Mission is grounded in the Christian values of mercy and love, providing an array of services - nutritious meals, clothing, groceries, 24/7 men's shelter, counselling, life skills training, Bible studies, and family services. We also operate a childcare centre and after school programs - plus a summer camp for children and youth.

But: La Société canadienne du sang est un organisme de bienfaisance sans but lucratif. Elle assure l'accessibilité, la fiabilité et la durabilité du système qui fournit les produits biologiques essentiels à la transfusion et à la transplantation au nom des gouvernements des provinces et des territoires, sauf le Québec. En tant qu'organisme de bienfaisance enregistré, elle compte sur la contribution des donateurs pour financer la recherche et l'innovation, et renforcer les programmes nationaux axés sur le sang, les cellules souches, les organes et les tissus. Les donateurs jouent un rôle primordial dans cette chaîne de vie qui, en tout temps, fait le lien entre les patients et les produits sanguins dont ils ont besoin. Forts de la générosité de nos donateurs, nous réaliserons notre vision : aider chaque patient, couvrir chaque besoin et servir chaque Canadien.

Purpose: Spinal Cord Injury BC (SCI BC) helps people with spinal cord injuries and related physical disabilities adjust, adapt and thrive in their new lives, whether they are dealing with a new injury or struggling with the ongoing challenges of living and aging with a physical disability. Through our three core programs (Peer Support, Information Services, Access BC), we provide answers, social connections, educational opportunities and unique life experiences for people living with spinal cord injury, while helping to make the province more accessible for everyone.

Purpose: St. Boniface Hospital Foundation supports excellence in patient care and medical research at St. Boniface Hospital. Lives have been saved, can be saved, and will be saved, thanks to our donors. The Hospital was Western Canada's first, with a legacy of more than 150 years as a pioneer in research and patient care. Manitoba's first cardiac surgery in 1959, developing Canada's first in-hospital palliative care program in 1974, and the country's first free-standing research facility in 1987 are just a few of our milestones. By joining our community of donors you become a lifeline for the tens of thousands of patients who depend on St. Boniface Hospital each year.

CREATE A LASTING LEGACY

Men, women and children forced to flee their homes have made extraordinary efforts to survive. For as long as people are displaced, UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, will continue to answer the call to support millions of refugees, forcibly displaced communities and stateless people—today, tomorrow and for years to come.

A gift in your Will to UNHCR means your generosity can provide vital services and supplies to those who need it urgently, wherever an emergency strikes.

Contact Kudzai Riva, Director of Planned Giving, at rivak@unhcr.org or (416) 926-7974 to learn more about the impact of leaving a gift in your Will.

But: Humaine. Ouverte. Engagée. Spirituelle. L'Université Saint-Paul (USP) était la première institution post-secondaire à Ottawa. Plus qu'une université, l'USP est une communauté. Notre but: Catalyser le changement et l'innovation social afin de co-construire un monde plus juste et plus humain. L'USP célèbre son 175e anniversaire (1848-2023) – 175 ans à célébrer ensemble!

Purpose: Since its founding in 1918, The War Amps has grown from assisting war amputees – whom we still serve – to all amputees, including adults and children. A charitable estate donation in your will honours the legacy of war amputees and funds our essential programs for amputees across Canada, such as our Child Amputee (CHAMP) Program. CHAMP provides comprehensive support, including financial assistance for artificial limbs, to allow children to lead independent and active lives. With your help, our programs will carry on long into the future. The War Amps does not receive government grants.

It started with a cough that just wouldn't go away...

Mary, an otherwise healthy non-smoker, spent years seeing different doctors, looking for answers. Finally, a respirologist prescribed tests that revealed the devastating diagnosis: pulmonary fibrosis (PF). Mary had never even heard of this rare, progressive disease which causes scarring in the lungs, making breathing more and more of a challenge. Currently, there is no cure.

The Canadian Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation (CPFF) is Canada's ONLY national organization dedicated to raising awareness, supporting patients and caregivers, funding research, and advocating for the 30,000 Canadians living with this little-known disease. By supporting CPFF, you will ensure that people like Mary have hope for the future.
