PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Transformation, Evolution & Challenge

Welcome to the 37th edition of the Canadian Donor's Guide – your authoritative annual directory of fundraising organizations in Canada. I appreciate the opportunity to provide you with this comprehensive reference resource and related editorial content to assist with your respective responsibilities in the planned giving environment.

Delivering more than 17,000 copies of our publication to key decision makers and professional advisors in Canada's donor community every year is not possible without the relationships the Canadian Donor's Guide shares with the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP), the Canadian Bar Association, STEP Canada and Imagine Canada. We are so very thankful for their support and commitment to our efforts. In addition, we could not provide this Guide without the many charitable organizations across Canada who put their trust in us to bring their messages to their key audience – those charities who purchase advertising.

In my two previous publisher's notes I have written about how our world has been changing significantly – and here I am again to write about the continuing changes in our world.

Although we are not currently experiencing shutdowns due to the COVID virus, we are still being affected by the pandemic as many of us are finding our "new normals" in the way we work and live.

Since our last edition we have also witnessed war commenced against Ukraine in a way no other war has been witnessed. Through social media and traditional media, we have a very clear, current view of the horrors of war. We have also seen heartwarming stories of people around the world supporting the people of Ukraine. You will find some of those stories of inspiring Canadians included here by both the Canadian Red Cross and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees through UNHCR Canada.

Much of our contributed content speaks of change. Change can be challenging but it can bring good things, too. The pandemic and increasing food insecurity had the Ottawa Mission finding new ways to serve those in need. You will read, in these pages, of how much they learned and how they have been able to expand their reach to so many more people.

Sometimes we must go through difficult times to find our way to better times. Some of our contributors are sharing their opinions and offering questions to ask ourselves as we attempt to begin work on reconciliation and learn from Indigenous people. Joanne Linka advises us to be brave, be willing to learn and unlearn and to take our guidance and leadership from Indigenous people in her article about decolonization. Joanne asks some great questions that we all might want to consider.

You will read about others facing chal-

Alison Stoneman
Publisher, Canadian Donor's Guide

lenges in these pages. Keira Davlut, who despite starting life facing many challenges, remains a "vibrant young girl" who gives back by supporting the Children's Hospital Foundation of Manitoba.

Donavon Henrion shows resilience & determination in his fight against MS in the article from the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada. Despite MS taking him off the hockey surface as a player, Donavon finds ways to keep hockey in his life.

I thank Linnea Dick for sharing her personal story of intergenerational trauma -- feeling that she was missing a huge part of herself and how it led to her work today with WE MATTER. WE MATTER is an Indigenous-led organization supporting Indigenous youth. We are pleased to have them in the Guide this year.

In the article 'Why Philanthropy Needs a New Story,' Julia Howell tells us that the story of philanthropy is not static but rather evolving and improving but it will take work and challenges to do so.

Paul Nazareth writes about changing times for charities and for donors. Paul encourages all donors to dream big, work together with charities to evolve and find the best way to mark their legacy. Paul also refers to Will Power – a new initiative of the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP). We are thrilled to share some of Will Power's information in the inner pages of this Guide as we believe in their campaign to make gifts in Wills the norm for Canadians. As their website states “Leaving a gift in a Will to charity turns the ordinary Canadian into an extraordinary philanthropist.” And Dave Leman tells us, in the article submitted by WWF-Canada, that it is “wise for us to think and care....for those coming after us”.

CPA Canada gives us some good advice on getting to know the charities we are supporting – including planning, research, involvement and even “listening to our gut.” Good advice for just about any situation, in my mind.

You will read about more change in the article by Suzana Popovic-Montag who updates us on the way video technology in estate planning has changed and will likely become standard operating procedure in the future. And, while we are on the topic of Wills, please take a moment to read Paul Trudelle’s words about where to keep your will. Good advice for all of us.

We are appreciative to have Malcolm Burrows join us with an update on how charities and executors are managing with the updated estate donation rules that were implemented several years ago.

Adam Aptowitzer provides us with his updated tax considerations and we thank him for tackling that challenging subject for us.

The Bruyère Foundation shares information on palliative care and their current research project to transform palliative care delivery for patients and caregivers. They also encourage us to have those challenging conversations about death and dying in order to make our wishes known if we are unable to have those conversations in the future.

We look to the future for change as well.

Teresa Marques from Rideau Hall Foundation tells us about the efforts being made to encourage youth leadership and find ways to provide more accessible paths to participation for youth who are “innovating and engaging across the country.”

Thank you again for your dedicated support of the Canadian Donor’s Guide as a valued resource. If you have any questions, suggestions or enhancements, feel free to contact me directly. May the Guide always be helpful in your endeavours to easily and effectively match donors with charities.

Transformation, evolution, challenge and change are happening – let’s ask ourselves the tough questions, keep our minds and hearts open and aspire to become the people who will create a better sector, a better country and a better world.

PERSONAL LEGACY

Mapping your Genome of Generosity

If you are holding this resource in your hands -- or reading the online guide -- you have started down a path to plan the ultimate charitable gift - a bequest in your Will.

My work for over two decades has been serving generous, kind, thoughtful people who have given to charities all of their lives, and to do so as part of their estate plan. It's been a privilege and joy to walk alongside people who believe in the power of partnering with a charity to change the world, care for humanity, advance education, innovation and so much more.

The Canadian Donor's Guide has been part of that journey for thousands of Canadians and their estate advisors. One of my favourite things about observing how people use this guide is when they realize that dividing up everything they have on Earth (after all, we can't take it with us) and using Canada's generous tax incentives in their planning means everyday citizens can give away so much more than they thought. I'm no scientist but I'm hearing from so many healthcare leaders that the future of medicine is bespoke, customized and more holistically fit for the individual. Giving and generosity are moving in this direction too. But how many Canadians spend the time to think about the change they want to make? To which organizations are they giving and whom do they feel can carry their vision into the future?

That's the superpower of this guide. Here are three ways to get the most out of it:

There have been incredible advancements -- even at charities you thought you knew. It's time to go deeper. Reach out to the charity contact in this guide. Ask about the work you've been supporting and how your bequest might not only fund the present but create more opportunities tomorrow and forever. Please know that you can do this confidentially and you can ask for anonymity. This is more common in what we know is a very personal consideration about what you have worked so hard for all your life. Many Canadians are thinking about evolved ways to incorporate social, racial, gender and environmental justice into their giving. Even more are asking how their giving can be a part of reconciliation with the first peoples of this land. Canada's charities are thinking about this too. Even more charities are thinking about how to collaborate with social-enterprise and small-business to think smarter and do better. Contact your favourite charity and ask about the priorities that mean something to you and your family.

Your advisor can help! In 2022, more advisors are certified as Master Financial Advisors in Philanthropy or MFA-Ps, a new designation in our community that our team at CAGP co-launched with the Knowledge Bureau and Spire Philanthropy to help your advisor be a better partner in planning your giving. Today for tax; tomorrow as part of your financial plan; and, in the future as part of your estate plan. For the many reading this who are part of generous families, consider using this guide as part of that conversation. Many Canadians don't have this powerful family conversation to move from what 'I give' to what 'we can do' as a family. Creating a family vision of multi-generational values is a growing strategy that we are hearing is bringing joy and meaning to families across the nation.

Paul Nazareth, MFA-P
Vice President, Education & Development,
Canadian Association of Gift Planners

You are part of a global movement to activate the personal legacy of every Canadian! Have you heard about WillPower.ca? It's a movement to support all people in this journey of life, legacy and personal meaning. You are doing something deeply meaningful here. Please know there are many supports as you think about this powerful way to tell your life story with your generosity.

So, please, dream bigger! Explore more organizations and give yourself the gift of letting your giving speak for your heart, mind and vision for your community, our country and the world.

Paul Nazareth has worked in Canada's philanthropic sector for over 20 years. Currently, Vice President, Education & Development at the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) and was previously VP at the charity CanadaHelps. Paul has been a philanthropic advisor with a national wealth management firm in a trust company and spent 15 years working with charities from universities to churches. Paul is a board member of several charities including The Circle on Indigenous Philanthropy and the Advisory Council of Carleton University's Masters in Philanthropy and Non-profit Leadership program. He serves as faculty for the Master Financial Advisor in Philanthropy (MFA-P) program led by CAGP, Knowledge Bureau and Spire Philanthropy and is a frequent instructor for the tax and advisor community with organizations like CPA, Advocis and Estate Planning Councils.

Estate Donations: Six Years Later

The 2016 introduction of the Graduated Rate Estate (GRE) regime was accompanied by the “estate donations” rules. These Income Tax Act provisions altered the administrative and tax treatment of gifts by will, as well as direct designation gifts of life insurance, RRSP/RRIFs, and TFSAs. How are charities and executors managing with these rules six and a half years later?

I’d say the experience is mixed.

Estate Donation Features

Let me focus on gifts by will. The “estate donation” provisions changed fundamental attributes of gifts by will.

- A gift is deemed to be a donation of the estate, not of the donor during his/her lifetime.
- The number of returns on which a donation tax receipt may be claimed increased from two (final lifetime T1 returns) to up to seven (final two lifetime returns and five estate T3 returns).
- In the old regime, gifts were deemed to occur just before death at the same time as the deemed disposition of taxable property. Previously, gifts could be claimed without property being transferred to the charity. In the new regime, the executor needs to transfer funds to the charity, which then issues a receipt for fair market value. The tax receipt is filed by the executor to claim the donation tax credits for the estate.
- Under the old regime, there was no effective limit on the claim period. Under the new, the donation must be received 60 months after the date of death or it cannot be claimed.

Learnings

I spoke to a few charities and executors to find out their experience with the estate donation rules. There are a few practical issues that have emerged:

- Executors are making larger distributions to charity upfront in order to file the tax receipt on the terminal T1, which in some situations eliminates all tax owing. Failure to do so mean there may be a significant tax liability in the T1. Charities appreciate this sense of urgency, as money is received faster.
- Executors are facing pressure to distribute illiquid in-kind property to charity quickly. Examples of illiquid property include private company shares and art. Again, the goal is to get immediate tax relief, but that assumes the charity capable of receiving the property in-kind. In one case, the urgency to distribute property in-kind was due to the closing of the 60-month distribution window. After 60 months, the donation would not be eligible for any tax relief.
- One charity, which had a 100% residual interest in an estate, reported that an executor had to be pushed to refile tax returns after the initial distribution gift had been made after two years. The result was $300,000 a tax refund for the charity. (Charities, make sure executors file tax receipts, otherwise you may be leaving money on the table.)

Malcolm Burrows

Head of Philanthropic Advisory Services

- The same charity with the residual bequest also reported experience with the “estate donation loop”. That is, every distribution triggered a donation tax receipt necessitating the refiling of T1s and T3s. Every refiling generated more funds for distribution to the charity. In this case, the loop process happened three times before everyone decided enough is enough.
- The once popular “donate to eliminate” will clause is broken. This clause provided the executor with discretion to donate just enough to charity to eliminate (or mostly eliminate) the tax on the terminal T1. Due to the estate donation loop and the effect of refiling, there is no single formula that enables the executor to make a single discretionary donation to offset all taxes.

These are just a few issues that have emerged with the estate donation regime. If you have more stories to share, please send me an email. It would be helpful to hear what others are experiencing.

CHARITABLE DONATIONS

A Summary of Tax Considerations

INTRODUCTION

It is a peculiar result of history that regulation of charities in Canada is part of the Income Tax Act (ITA). One of the unintended consequences of this placement is that the regulation of charities fits primarily within an income tax context. So, donations are incentivized through the use of income tax mechanisms, and sanction against charities is framed as the revocation of the special status that provides charities with their umbrella of privileges. This means that both charities and their supporters cannot fully understand their options for supporting a particular charitable aim without understanding the incentives of donating to charity and the limitations in charitable operations.

QUALIFIED DONEES

It bears mentioning that government has extended the benefits given to charities to certain other entities known as qualified donees. They include:

- Registered Canadian Amateur Athletic Associations;
- Certain organizations that provide low cost housing for the aged;
- Most municipalities;
- Certain municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada;
- Registered National Arts Service Organizations
- Certain foreign charities that have received a gift from the federal government;
- The federal and provincial governments;

- The United Nations and its agencies; and
- Registered Journalism Organizations.

INCENTIVES

As the incentives for donating are primarily tax-based, one should have a basic understanding of the tax system to appreciate the value of the inducement. There are two fundamental aspects of Canada's tax system to keep in mind. The first is that Canadians are taxed progressively. That is, the first chunk of income (a bracket) is taxed at a low percentage, the next chunk at a higher rate, and so on. The second rule to understand is that – after a Canadian adds up their entire income – there are certain subtractions that are made that reduce the total amount of tax that is paid to the government. Those that are made prior to the application of the tax rate are called deductions; those that are made after are called credits.

Tax donations are treated as either donations or credits depending upon who makes the donation. If the donations are made by corporations, the donor entity can deduct the amount of the donation from its income prior to the application of the appropriate tax rate(s) to its income bracket(s). On the other hand when donations are made by individuals, the amount of the donation is multiplied by the appropriate federal percentage and deducted from federal tax, and the same procedure is conducted in each province at their rates. The product of these calculations is then deducted from the tax owing.

Adam Aptowitzer

The tax credit itself is determined by multiplying the first $200 by the lowest combined federal/provincial rate in the appropriate province (except Alberta), and multiplying everything over $200 by the designated rate (in most Canadian jurisdictions the highest rate provincial rate). The table on the next page (Table A, page 12) illustrates the tax credits available for donations of $1,200 in the different provinces.

To simplify the discussion, we will make two assumptions. First, unless otherwise stated, the donor holds the items to be donated as capital property. Second, we will assume a credit rate of 46%.

DONATIONS OF CASH

Donations of cash are fairly straightforward. The charity simply receipts the face value of the amount donated. (This does not apply to currency held for collection purposes). Depending on the province and the donor's tax bracket, the tax credits generated from the donation would offset the tax owing on the income earned, so no tax would be payable on the money earned – and then donated. At lower income brackets, and in Alberta, the credits would actually more than offset the tax owing and the donor would be able to shelter other income from tax with the credits earned from this donation. If the donor is donating cash that is not income to them in the year donating, the credit could be used to offset taxes owing from other sources. But, in those provinces where the tax rate is higher than the credit rate on donations, the donor could still be paying tax on a dollar given to charity!

PUBLIC SECURITIES

Canada levies tax on 50 per cent of the appreciation in value of a capital good. The tax is levied when the item is disposed of (i.e. sold, given away or donated).

However, the ITA does contain an exemption for publicly-listed securities (on certain exchanges) donated to charity.

Moreover, the donor continues to receive a donation tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the shares donated. Thus, there is no tax on the donation, but the donor still receives a tax credit equal to the fair market value of the donation.

While shares of publicly-traded corporations are the most popular form of security to be donated to charity, there are a variety of other sophisticated financial securities that may also be donated.

Examples include: exchange-traded funds, index funds, hedge funds, warrants, rights, and put and call options. As long as these products qualify as publicly-traded securities, they will qualify for the special tax treatment accorded donations of this type.

Example:

Assume that Kirk lives in Ontario and buys one share of a high-tech company for $1.00. Over time, the share rises in value and may even split once or more than once. After ten years, with all splits factored in, Kirk owns shares worth a total of $100. If Kirk were to sell the share he would have a capital gain of $99 (i.e. the fair market value of $100, less the cost of $1). Applying the capital gains inclusion rate of 50%, only $47.50 would be taxable. Further applying a tax rate of 46%, the amount of tax payable would be $21.85. Thus, if Kirk sells the shares, he is left with after-tax income of $78.15 (i.e. $100 - $21.85).

Conversely, let's say Kirk decides he wants to donate his shares instead of selling them. In this case, Kirk has no tax to pay and, of course, receives no income from the sale of the share. He does however receive a tax receipt for $100, which will offset $46 of taxes due from other sources.

So, assuming Kirk is paying tax on income from other sources, the actual after-tax cost of this donation is $54.

FLOW-THROUGH SHARES

For income tax purposes, the cost of such a share is deemed to be zero. So, even if the buyer buys the share at $10.00 and sells it at $8.00, the share is still assumed to have gained $8.00 in value and is therefore taxed on an $8.00 capital gain even though it actually lost $2.00. (Don't worry about the shareholder though; ownership of the share gave her access to a deduction making it worthwhile). Flow-through shares are like any other asset and can be donated to charity. When these shares are publicly traded, there is no tax on the capital gain. However, for purposes of donation, the law considers the amount of the purchase price to be a capital gain and only the amount in excess of that (if there is any) to be eligible for the capital gains exemption.

STOCK OPTIONS

An employee who exercises a stock option (i.e. buys it at less than fair market value) receives a benefit equal to the difference between the purchase price (and any amounts they may have paid for the option) and the fair market value at the time of purchase. Tax is calculated based on the amount of this benefit. In certain circumstances, the employee can claim a deduction against the stock option benefit so only 50% of the benefit is taxable. If an employee stock option is exercised and marketable securities are donated within 30 days after the option is exercised, and if certain other conditions are met, only 25% of the benefit is taxable.

Individuals who make qualifying donations of marketable securities acquired through such stock options are not required to report any of the benefit. And, if the shares are traded on a public exchange, then their donation is treated as the donation of other publicly listed shares as described previously.

PRIVATE SECURITIES

The donation of securities of private corporations is dealt with in one of two ways; either the gifts are "excepted," or they are not. An excepted gift is a share donated to a charitable organization or public foundation where the donor deals at arm's length with the charity's directors/trustees, officers and other like officials. In these circumstances the gift is treated as any other gift of capital in which there is no special tax treatment for the donation (i.e. the donor pays tax on the disposition).

Table A - Tax Credit on $1,200 in donations for 2020

In cases where the gift has been donated to a private foundation or to a public charity to which the donor is related, the gift is not considered "made" until one of two things happen: either the item donated must cease to be a non-qualifying security (e.g. the corporation is no longer controlled by the donor or the corporation becomes publicly listed), or the charity has disposed of the security within five years of receiving the donation. The fair market value of the gift is then the lesser of:

- the value of the security when transferred to the charity,
- and the value of the security when the gift is deemed to have been made.

Note that the donor does not have to include any capital gain in their income before the shares are sold by the charity, so that the donor is not paying tax in advance of receiving the receipt. If the charity does not sell the shares within five years, the donor will not receive a receipt and the gain will never be taxable.

RRSPs/RRIFs

People may find that they have more than enough money in their RRSPs once they get to a certain age, and are willing to make donations in their lifetime in order to see the fruits of those donations while they are still alive. The RRSP rules do allow for withdrawals from the plan, but upon withdrawal the institution that holds the account (usually a bank) is required to withhold certain amounts. These amounts, on a per withdrawal basis (i.e. not cumulatively for the year), are:

- 10% (5% in Québec) on withdrawals up to $5,000;
- 20% (10% in Québec) on withdrawals between $5,001 and $15,000, and;
- 30% (15% in Québec) on withdrawals of more than $15,000.

The amounts withdrawn are claimed as income to the owner of the RRSP in the year withdrawn, and tax is paid at the owner's marginal rate. Thus, if a potential donor wants to donate $50,000 and has that money in his or her RRSP, a withdrawal of $50,000 would give the potential donor outside of Québec $35,000 cash to donate. The remaining 30 per cent ($15,000 in this case) would be remitted to the government by the bank and credited as income tax already paid when the donor files his or her tax return for that year.

A donor may also wish to donate his or her RRSP or RRIF upon death. There are two ways to do this. One way is to list the charity as a beneficiary of the RRSP in the donor's Will. The other way is to make use of the direct beneficiary election, which is signed when the RRSP is first opened (and can usually be changed at will). If the first method is used, the RRSP will fall into the donor's general estate before passing on to the charity. Under the second method, the RRSP will automatically become the property of the charity without going through the estate.

The advantage of using the RRSP direct beneficiary election is that the RRSP will not pass through probate. When a Will is probated, the various provinces charge different amounts of tax on the total value of assets passed on in the Will. Thus, the amount of money in an RRSP is added to the other assets and a portion is taken by the government before any of the assets are passed on.

INSURANCE

Sometimes an insurance policy becomes superfluous. If the policy is unnecessary the donor may decide to donate it to charity.

From a tax perspective, the donor of a life insurance policy will have an income inclusion of the proceeds of disposition less the adjusted cost base (ACB). An income inclusion is distinct from a capital gain and effectively means that a donation of an insurance policy has no net tax benefit for the donor. The ACB calculation is rather complicated and takes into account the premiums paid, dividends received, and – for policies purchased after 1982 – the Net Cost of Pure Insurance (NCPI). Despite the ominous name, the NCPI is not overly difficult to calculate, although it will likely require professional advice from either an experienced advisor or the insurance company involved.

In a February 2008 bulletin, and later in another setting, the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) laid down certain guidelines for determining the Fair Market Value of a disposed-of policy. In these pronouncements, the calculation of the proceeds of disposition (POD) of an insurance policy takes into account:

- the policy's loan value;
- the face value of the policy;
- the state of health of the insured and their life expectancy;
- conversion privileges;
- other policy terms, such as term riders, double indemnity provisions; and,
- replacement value.

The idea here is that the value of a policy may or may not be accurately reflected by any cash surrender value held by the policy. When valuing the policy for both tax and receipting purposes, the donor and the charity must take into account the fact that the donor may be very ill and the policy may mature shortly after donation. A policy that would otherwise be impossible to receipt would become valuable to the donor. To do this, the advice of an actuary and an appraiser is critical to correctly valuing the policy.

The charity may either cash the policy and use the funds immediately, or pay the premiums on the policy and collect the larger death benefit when the insured dies. Of course, a very generous donor may not only donate the policy to the charity but also donate the yearly premiums to the charity. In this case, both the donation of the policy and the donated premiums would be receiptable.

ANNUITIES

An annuity is a contract under which one person deposits a sum of money with another in exchange for a subsequent income. It is basically the reverse concept of insurance.

The income may be paid for either a specified period, for life, or for life with a minimum guaranteed period. Under the latter method, if the purchaser of the annuity dies during the guaranteed period, the annuity will be paid to some other person whom the purchaser had designated to receive it.

Although annuities are normally purchased from insurance companies or trust companies, life annuities are sometimes purchased from charities. Essentially, a person gives the charity a sum of money irrevocably in exchange for a promise by the charity to pay the donor a monthly income for life. The funds received would then be invested by the charity at a higher rate than it would pay to the donor.

For annuities issued after December 21, 2002, the donor would be eligible to receive a receipt for an amount equal to the excess of the amount contributed by the donor over the amount that would be paid at that time to an arm's-length third party to acquire an annuity to fund the guaranteed payments.

CANADIAN CULTURAL PROPERTY

The Government of Canada has set up the Canadian Cultural Property Export Review Board to certify which artwork or other item has cultural significance to Canadians. This not only applies to works with a Canadian aspect, it applies to any cultural work that Canada may want to keep within its borders. If the donation is certified and made to a designated institution, there is no tax due on the disposition. Thus, if the charity is hoping to attract donations of property with a particular cultural significance, it is important to secure the designation.

There are two categories of designation:

- Category A is granted for an indefinite period of time to institutions that are well-established and meet all of the criteria related to certain legal, curatorial and environmental requirements.
- Category B is granted in relation to an institution involved in the proposed acquisition of an object (or collection) that does not meet all of the criteria for designation, but which has demonstrated its capability to effectively preserve the type of property in question. More information on the designation is available from the Department of Canadian Heritage on their website at <https://www.canada.ca/en/canadian-heritage/services/funding/movable-cultural-property/designated-organizations.html>

The criteria by which the review board makes its decisions is beyond the scope of this article, but the board has published a guide on the subject available here: <https://www.canada.ca/content/dam/pch/documents/services/movable-cultural-property/certif-guide-eng.pdf>.

As a proper certification may involve many months of research, a request for certification should be made well before the donation is contemplated.

If a taxpayer donates certified property to a designated institution, there will not be any tax owing on the gift. In addition, the taxpayer is entitled to a tax receipt for 100% of the value of the gift (as determined by the review board).

INVENTORY

The determination of whether an item is inventory or capital is one of the most fundamental areas of our income tax system, but nevertheless is shrouded in vagueness and controversy. For example, to most people a house is a capital property. But, if the owner of the home is engaged in the business of buying and selling homes, the property becomes inventory of a business. There is a different tax treatment on the disposition of inventory, as 100% of the value is included in income (as opposed to capital, of which only 50% is included). Nonetheless, the donation of inventory will result in tax credits that will at least offset the tax due on the disposition of the inventory.

Example:

Spock runs a bakery. His business is not incorporated, so all the income of the business is taxed at his personal rates during the year.

After Spock has deducted all of his expenses, he is left with taxable income in the year of $50,000. If Spock sells one more cake that is worth $100, he will pay tax on that cake of $31. However, upon donating the cake, he will be entitled to tax credits of approximately $40 (assuming that he has already made at least $200 worth of donations). Spock can then offset the tax owed by disposing of the last cake and using the additional $9 against the tax owing on his other $50,000 of income.

Of course, as income grows, so too does the tax rate, meaning that there are fewer leftover credits. In those provinces where the tax is equal to or greater than the credits generated by donation (which is all provinces except Alberta) there would be no additional tax credits leftover for use. In Alberta however, the credits will always more than offset the tax on the disposition of the donated item, even at the highest brackets. Given the number of provinces, the multiplicity of tax rates and brackets, and the frequency with which they change, an accountant should be retained to calculate the results of any donation of inventory.

PERSONAL USE PROPERTY

Personal Use Property (PUP) is property that is owned by the taxpayer and that is primarily for the personal use and enjoyment of the taxpayer or persons related to the taxpayer.

PUP includes:

- Bottles of wine
- Loyalty points programs
- Air Miles
- Shoppers Optimum points
- Religious items
- Gift certificates
- Clothes
- Artwork
- Hobby items
- Comic books
- Model trains
- Toys
- Land (e.g. a fishing hole)
- Books

Normally, when these types of items are donated to a charity, the charity does not issue a receipt, nor does the owner expect one. This is, in most cases, the appropriate treatment. However, technically it does not have to be so.

The ITA specifies that for donations of PUP, the minimum cost is deemed to be $1,000. This is true regardless of the actual cost to the owner. The ITA also deems the item sold for a minimum of $1,000, again regardless of the actual sale/donation value. So, when taken into the donor's tax return, there is no taxable event on items that are worth less than $1,000.

On the other hand, a tax receipt can still be issued for these types of items. The value on the receipt would reflect the item's fair market value. This receipt could then be used to generate some tax credits on the return (small though they may be). Charities should note, however, that valuing household items can be very difficult, and receipts should only be issued if value can be defensibly determined.

Example

Sulu bought a "Tickle Me Elmo" doll for $20. Shortly thereafter, it became a collector's item and the fair market value increased to $100. Realizing that there are needy children without a Tickle Me Elmo, Sulu donates the toy to a local charity. In return, he receives a tax receipt for the value of $100. On his tax return he calculates his capital gain as follows:

Deemed Proceeds of Disposition	$1,000
Deemed Cost	-$1,000
Capital Gain	0

As there is no capital gain, there is no tax payable. On the other hand, Sulu will receive a tax receipt for the fair market value of the doll ($100). Applying our assumptions (i.e. a tax rate of 46% and Sulu has already made at least $200 of donations), the $100 receipt will allow Sulu to claim back $46 of taxes owing from other sources.

The implication of this policy is that when items are donated which have an actual value greater than $1,000 but a cost lower than $1,000, the value of the donation will be enhanced because the amount of the capital gain will be reduced.

Example 2

McCoy decides to donate a model train set which he purchased for $100, but has it appraised in advance and discovers to his delight that it is actually worth $2,000.

McCoy still decides to donate the train set to a willing charity, which issues him a receipt for $2,000. He then calculates his taxes as follows:

Actual Proceeds of Disposition	$2,000
Deemed Cost	$1,000
Capital Gain	$1,000
Tax	$230
Tax Credits	$920
Total leftover credits	$690

There are three notes to make about the type of property donated.

First, make sure that the property is actually transferable. While loyalty program points are property, some plans will not allow you to transfer the points to anyone else, and so they effectively cannot be donated. In this scenario, a donor may consider redeeming the points and then donating the actual item. Of course, this may prove to be of limited assistance to a charity that all of a sudden finds itself obligated to use a plane ticket to some place it did not want to go, on a date it did not want to travel.

Second, both the individual and the charity must obtain a reliable valuation. From the perspective of the individual, an improper valuation could lead to a donation tax credit being disallowed by the CRA. The charity, on the other hand, has an obligation to issue proper receipts. So, if the receipts are overvalued, the charity may find itself facing uncomfortable questions from the CRA.

Finally, there are rules in the ITA which prevent situations where donors are buying and donating items that fall below the $1000 threshold simply to create tax receipts to shelter income from other sources. While the charity will not necessarily be punished if involved in such a scenario, the donor could have the receipts disallowed.

LISTED PERSONAL PROPERTY

Listed Personal Property (LPP) is a subclass of PUP. It consists of certain specific items which are held both as an investment and as hobby items. The list includes artwork, stamps, books, coins and sculptures. Unless it is Certified Canadian Cultural Property (see earlier in this article), LPP has the same tax treatment as PUP.

REAL ESTATE

Generally, the donation of most real estate will be treated like the donation of any other type of capital property. If the item is inventory, the donor will be taxed on the full proceeds of disposition, and, if the item is capital, the donor will only pay tax on 50% of the proceeds of disposition. There are, however, two significant exceptions to this rule.

Principal residence

The first exception is the donation of a principal residence. Canadian residents are not taxed on the gain arising from the appreciation of their principal residence. So, if a donor bought his home for $100,000 and sells (or donates) it when it is worth $1,000,000, no tax will be payable on the appreciation in value (assuming the home was the donor's principal residence for that entire time).

If the donor were to donate the home to a charity, not only would there be no tax consequences on the disposition, but he or she would receive a tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the home at the time of the donation.

In some cases, it might make sense for the donor to leave their home to a charity in their Will. By doing this, they might be able to use the tax credits from the donation to offset the income from the deemed disposition of their other assets, and carry back the credits to the previous year. In both the year of death and the year preceding death, the estate can use the tax credits to offset up to one hundred percent of the income. Given that the deemed disposition of assets (with the exception of the principal residence) usually results in a large income in the year of death, the donor might, in fact, be able to do some significant tax planning in this way.

Environmental property

The donation of environmental property has a treatment similar to that of Certified Cultural Property. The treatment applies where property is designated as ecologically sensitive land by the Minister of the Environment (or a person designated by the Minister) and donated to any of:

- The federal or a provincial government;
- A municipality in Canada;
- A municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada; or,
- A registered charity that has a main purpose (in the opinion of that Minister) of conserving and protecting Canada's environmental heritage, and that is approved by that Minister or that person in respect of the gift.

In any of these cases, there will be no taxable capital gain on the donation.

We have described the specific tax treatment of items donated where there is no tax on the capital gain of the item in the sections on public securities and certified cultural property. The only significant difference is that tax credits generated from a donation of this type may be carried forward for ten years. The entire value of the donation is available to offset tax owing from other sources at the highest rates.

RESIDUAL INTERESTS

It is possible to divide ownership of the property during one's life (called a life interest) from ownership upon the death of that person (called a residual interest). Once the residual interest is sold or given away, however, the property will belong to the owner of the residual interest when the owner of the life interest dies. A donor might consider this course of action in situations where they want to enjoy the income or use of the property during their lifetime and yet donate the property to the charity during their lifetime as opposed to on their death.

The value of the residual interest is calculated using an estimated value of the underlying property at the expected death of the donor (in itself determined from actuarial mortality tables) using present value dollars. This amount will be the value listed on the charity's donation receipt.

Determining the fair market value of a property at the expected death of the owner at some point in the future is a complicated mathematical task best left to a qualified actuary and appraiser.

From a tax perspective, when the owner divides the rights and donates the residual interest, the donor would generally incur a tax consequence. The tax owing will be a function of the cost of the right to the owner and its estimated value at the time of disposition. Generally speaking, this income will be treated as a capital gain. The capital gain is calculated according to a specific formula and depends on the gain in value of the residual interest relative to the entire property.

CHARITABLE REMAINDER TRUST

A trust is a legal device which effectively accomplishes one or both of the following objectives:

- It separates the ownership of property (the capital interest) from the right to receive income from the property (the income interest); and,
- It can separate the person who legally controls the property from those entitled to benefit from it.

A Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT) is similar to the donation of a residual interest in that it allows the donor to donate the capital of the trust now, but the charity does not receive it until some later point (such as on the death of the donor). A CRT is particularly useful in situations where it is difficult to record the division of interests on title (such as artwork). Despite its legal potency, creating a CRT is simply a matter of signing the appropriate legal documents.

When a donor creates a CRT, they dispose of the residual interest in the property to the trust and then donates the certain rights in the trust to the charity (the "capital interest"). It is important to note that the donation in this case occurs when the owner transfers the interest in the trust to the charity. Thus, if the underlying property is, for example, publicly-traded securities, the gift of an interest in the trust will not attract the same favourable tax treatment as donating the securities would have; it is a donation of an interest in a trust, not of securities.

The special tax treatment assigned to different types of property outlined elsewhere in this chapter (i.e., ecological property, publicly-traded securities or certified cultural property) likely makes them inappropriate candidates for this type of donation.

It is important not to create the trust with the charity as the beneficiary, because if the donor is not careful they will gift an interest in the trust with no property (and thus no value on the receipt), and any subsequent disposition to the trust will not be considered a gift by the CRA. The appropriate method is instead to create the trust with the donor holding both interests in the trust.

The donor then contributes the assets to the trust, and finally donates the capital interest to the charity. Of course, the donor would retain the income interest as long as is set out in the trust deed.

GIFTS TO U.S. CHARITIES

Individuals who reside in Canada and commute to their employment or place of business in the United States are allowed to deduct donations made to U.S. charitable organizations on the same terms as donations made to Canadian organizations.

There are, however, a number of other important conditions which must be met. Firstly, the commuter must live near the American border during the whole of the taxation year. Secondly, their U.S. employment or business income must represent the donor's chief source of income for that year. Thirdly, the donor must be able to demonstrate that the gift was made to a religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organization created or organized in or under the laws of the United States. Finally, they must be able to demonstrate that such a gift would be allowed as a deduction under the United States Internal Revenue Code. Where all those conditions are met, the donations in question are treated as donations made to a registered charity.

VOLUNTEER SERVICES

The ITA makes it very clear that only a gift to a charity is receiptable. A gift includes property or a right to property.

Unfortunately, services do not qualify as property and, therefore, are not receiptable.

GIFT BY WILL

One legal requirement of a gift is actual delivery of the gift to the recipient. However, where a gift is made by Will, such delivery is impossible until after the death of the person— sometimes well after. Under normal circumstances, the gift would not be complete until delivery is made. However, the law allows that where a gift is made by Will, it will be considered to have been made by the deceased in the few seconds preceding death, assuming of course that delivery occurs at some point after the death. In this way, the tax credits that are generated by the donation can be applied to the donor's year of death. This is particularly useful as there is often a large tax bill owing on death.

The law allows for certain differences from a strict calculation perspective. As previously discussed, a donor is generally only entitled to offset 75% of their taxable income using donation tax credits in a given year.

However, in the year of death (i.e. from January 1st until the date of the donor's death) the donor is entitled to offset up to 100% of their income, as filed by their executor. Any unused donation tax credits can be carried back one year, to the year preceding death, and be used to offset 100% of the tax debt owing in that year as well as the tax in the first three taxation years of the estate. One stipulation though is that the gift must be transferred (and accepted) by the qualified donee within three years of the death. Obviously, if the return for the year preceding death has already been filed, then it will be necessary to file an adjustment request in order to claim the donation tax credits.

BOOKS AND RECORDS

The Canadian income tax system is based upon the principle of honest self-reporting. Consequently, one of the most pervasive issues facing charities is the maintenance of proper books and records. The importance of the issue is underlined when it is understood that charities are usually in the process of proving their innocence rather than disproving their guilt. Without records, this is close to impossible. Indeed, if the charity were to appeal a decision of revocation of its status by the CRA, it would not even be entitled to give oral testimony. So, the importance of well maintained records is paramount.

What are books and records?

There is no standard definition of books and records. Fundamentally, however, an organization must have sufficient evidence to show that it is in compliance with the Act. To be clear, destroying evidence that an organization is not in compliance will not help the organization, as the lack of documents, in and of itself, is an offence. (Although the documents could be evidence of an offence with a more grievous penalty.)

There is a difference between the two concepts of 'books' and 'records'. 'Books' is not a defined term in the Income Tax Act, but is typically understood to be accounting records. A 'record' is defined and includes "an account, an agreement, a book, a charter table, a diagram, a form, an image, an invoice, a letter, a map, a memorandum, a plan, a return, a statement, a telegram, a voucher, and any other thing containing information whether written or in any other form."

No distinction is made in law between corporate and transactional records, but it is helpful to organize a charity by thinking in these terms. Corporate records are those documents required by law to define a corporation and its governance. They are often created with the co-operation of a government office, and are required so that the corporation meets certain statutory requirements.

Transactional records are those created by the organization to keep track of its operations and meetings. They still help the corporation meet its requirements under the law.

Corporate Records

A corporate entity must maintain current copies of its constituting documents (Articles of Incorporation, Articles of Continuance, Letters of Patent, Supplementary Letters of Patent, etc.), bylaws and minutes of meetings or resolutions. Organizations operating in more than one province would also be expected to have copies of their extra-provincial registration.

Meetings

Compliance with the various corporate acts requires minutes of meetings of both directors and members. Members generally meet annually while directors generally meet more often – both should have records of all of their formal meetings. If issues are discussed at informal meetings it is a good idea to make records of those as well. Often, the fact that it had the discussion is in itself valuable and it would be unwise for a charity to self-censor its minutes.

Format

There is no specific requirement that the record of happenings at meetings be kept in any particular way for the CRA's purposes (although for purposes of consistency, groups may wish to follow standard processes). Therefore, meetings that simply have notes of what was said and confirmed as accurate by the bulk of the attendees at the meeting are sufficient for most purposes.

Keep in mind that most corporate statutes do mandate that certain issues be dealt with by the members and / or directors and there may be technical requirements be met in the resolution.

Transactional Records

The vast majority of records held by a charity are its 'transactional' records. They are created by the day-to-day transactions of the organization and include its bank account statements, cheques, records of employee payment, invoices, statements of account, deposit books, etc. These are generally easy records for the organization to obtain as they are created by third parties. The challenge for most charities is to organize these records into some logical format in order that their T3010 can be produced at the end of the year. This role generally falls to a bookkeeper or some other individual prepared to keep these records.

On the assumption that the bulk of these records are being created by a third party, and that the charity simply needs to keep them, the charity will not face any difficulty in ensuring that its transactions are properly maintained. However, there are situations in which a charity faces difficulties because it is in a non-commercial or non-traditional setting.

Charities that engage in relief of poverty may find it difficult to track the expenditures with which they give alms to the poor. This can be obvious in a situation where the charity distributes food to individuals that simply need it or seem to need it. While the CRA is obviously aware that a charity is engaged in the provision of food for the hungry, it may ask how it can be certain that food is being given only to the poor and is not, for example, being distributed to the employees of the organization or being sold. While the CRA can be forgiving in such situations, it can, in some cases, be extremely difficult to ensure that records are maintained, to demonstrate that the charity's resources are being properly used.

Some foreign countries present another problem in that often the normal transactional records we would expect in Canada – say on the purchase of office supplies – simply may not exist there. Receipts and invoices are simply not used in some parts of the world. Charities should seek alternate means to track their resources.

Additional Records

Again, while there is no legal definition of 'additional records' these may include emails, or letters to the organization — and they may include records that the organization purposely creates in order that the CRA, if it ever looks to see, will accept as proof that the organization is properly meeting its responsibilities. Emails to and from the organization and letters to the organization must clearly be maintained. Charity officials should be careful to separate out their personal from official comments as an official may be unable to claim privacy over these emails. Moreover, emails between individuals may not necessarily be entered into the charity's records (say in a situation where they are not being saved by a corporate server). In these circumstances, directors should make sure to copy the charity so that the charity's obligations to keep records is met.

Creating Records

The organization may also seek to create records in order to show that it meets the legal tests involved. For example, to ensure that a charity's resources are properly used in a foreign country the charity may have the volunteers make reports, take pictures or record videos that are not otherwise necessary. Obviously, a charity must first understand the legal principle that it seeks to establish before creating the record. On this point, the charity should seek legal advice before proceeding.

Fundamentally, it is important that a charity understand what it must show in its records in order to comply with the law should the CRA investigate. Continuous education regarding a charity's obligations is critical so that the administration of the organization understands when to ask for reports of directors or others in whatever circumstances.

Where must they be kept?

The books and records of an organization must be kept, by law, at its registered office address. This however, is often an impossible task because the legal documents may be more easily kept at a lawyer's office, accounting records may be with the accountant, and other records may be with the organization. It can be inconvenient and costly to keep all the records in one place – particularly if they are voluminous.

The CRA seems to understand the practical difficulties in this aspect and does not, as a matter of course, seek to confirm the particular location of these records. In the course of an audit, CRA auditors generally either ask for information to be provided to them or meet at a mutually convenient location where the records are produced.

Nevertheless, we have seen instances where charities lose track of the location of their documents and so it would be wise for an organization to be aware of its records should they have to be produced.

Electronic Record Keeping

Nowadays, more and more records are either created in paper format for conversion to electronic format or in electronic format able to be printed at any time. Obviously, the CRA is as much interested in easy record-keeping as anybody else, and rules do exist for doing so electronically. These rules are outlined in two technical documents from the CRA – IC78-10R5 and IC05-1R1.

An organization that keeps electronic records must be able to provide them in an electronically readable and useable format to the CRA auditors so that they can be read on CRA equipment (although not every CRA department will accept electronic documents). For most modern records this is not an issue as long as they can be produced in PDF format. A regular problem is that the organization uses a bookkeeping or accounting software unknown to the CRA. However, as these records can often be converted from one format to another, there is usually a workaround. Electronic files can be encrypted, but the password must be provided to the CRA if requested.

If a record was originally created in paper format and then converted to electronic, the paper does not need to be kept. However, an electronic record must always be kept, even if converted from one format to another.

The CRA does allow for the keeping of these records online in the cloud. However, their requirement is that the server be located in Canada or at least that a copy of the records be maintained on a server in Canada.

One difficulty that arises from time to time — and it does not apply only to electronic records — is the accidental destruction of records. With paper records this can happen in terms of a fire or some other disaster. But, with electronic records, the loss of a USB key could undermine years of work by the organization. For this reason, electronic records should be copied and kept in safe, redundant locations as much as possible. If records are lost, the CRA may seek proof or a reason for such a loss and may be forgiving in the circumstance. However, there's no guarantee that the CRA will take this approach, and you can assume that the CRA auditors have heard the “dog ate my homework” type of excuse more often than most teachers.

How long to keep records

Generally speaking, all books and records must be kept for a minimum of six years from the end of the last tax year from which they relate. The tax year end is the same as the fiscal year end for the corporation, but is, by definition, the calendar year end for trusts and unincorporated associations. For purposes of the Employment Insurance Act and the Canada Pension Plan Act, the retention period begins at the end of the calendar year to which the books and records relate.

Technically, duplicate donation receipts of a registered charity (other than receipts for donations of property, which may be held for longer periods of time) is two years from the end of the calendar year in which the donations were made — but it would be inadvisable for a charity to rely on this specific requirement rather than the general one.

The obligations above relate to the Income Tax Act, but it is important to understand that obligations also exist in the various corporate acts. Typically, Corporate Records (as opposed to Transactional Records) are not destroyed.

Who Can See Records

Outside of the civil litigation — in which a Plaintiff or Defendant could be compelled to produce documents relating to the litigation

— there are really three groups of individuals who may be able to see various parts of corporate records. The directors, the members and government officials each have different levels of access to the charity's records — depending upon the circumstances.

What Language

The law requires that books and records be kept in either English or French.

Organizations that operate overseas typically have records in another language, and while technically the organization should have them translated as they are produced, practically this is often an expensive task. Moreover, CRA audit procedures limit an audit to a certain number of years, translating every document as it comes through may be unnecessary for years that are not under audit.

Even for years under audit, the CRA at times requests just sample documents, so the charity may be in the position of translating documents that will never be read.

Generally, the CRA allows a period of time for the production of documents, and understands that organizations operating in non-English or French-speaking parts of the world will have documents in other languages. Indeed, if someone sends an email to an organization in a language that is not English, the organization can hardly be faulted for the fact that its books and records are only in English or French.

Creative Fundraisers Helping Those in Ukraine

When conflict arose in Ukraine and surrounding countries in early 2022, Canadians wasted no time supporting the Ukraine Humanitarian Crisis Appeal.

Thanks to the generosity of people living in Canada, the Canadian Red Cross has contributed $98 million (as of July 2022) to the International Red Cross response to the humanitarian crisis in Ukraine and surrounding countries. As of July 2022, this support has contributed to the Red Cross collectively reaching more than 3.75 million people with humanitarian support in Ukraine and surrounding countries.

Did you know? If you connect with the Canadian Red Cross prior to starting your fundraiser, we can help you, including providing you with a personal donation web page?

Here are some amazing examples of how people across Canada have been moved to find creative ways -- using their interests and passions -- to raise money to help those affected by the conflict:

Pierogies for Peace

Dr. Daniel Chorney of Halifax, Nova Scotia, decided he wanted to help the country his grandparents came from. At first, he didn't know how to begin, having never fundraised before.

"I'm half Ukrainian, my grandparents came to Canada in 1948," Daniel explains. "I grew up with my grandma very closely, so it's very personal."

For him, growing up in the Ukrainian community, eating foods like pierogies (called "varenyky" in Ukraine) at celebrations was a common event.

"I knew that my grandmother and others at her church sold pierogies as a fundraiser while I was growing up," says Daniel. "Doing this, in the Ukraine community, is pretty common. What we're trying to do is make them, freeze them and sell them. Some people will cook them up and host a big dinner."

Daniel shares, "We're not in this business. My wife and I are psychologists, but we thought: 'we know how to make pierogies, our friends like them when I make them for my friends, so what if we just sold them frozen?'"

He recently held the Pierogies for Peace fundraising event at Good Robot Brewing Co. where he raised $12,210. After this success, Daniel now plans to fundraise more with future events, like teaching small groups how to make pierogies in lieu of donations.

Buttons for Ukraine

This compelling fundraiser started when 10-year-old Jake Tubaro, from Newmarket, Ontario, came home from school with a hand-drawn blue and yellow paper heart and a desire to help those fleeing Ukraine.

"This is Jake's brainchild," says his mom, Suzanne. "He was really struggling when this started and started asking a trillion questions. Then he saw the kids fleeing with parents with backpacks and that really bothered him -- 'what would I put in my backpack', 'what if it happened here', 'what would we do with the animals?'

"He went to school, and at recess, he drew a paper heart with Ukraine colours on it. He asked, 'do you think anyone will buy these paper hearts?' I told him I didn't think anyone would buy them, but maybe if we put them on a button. So, an Amazon order later, we had 50 buttons.

"That night, he sat down and made nine out of 50. He asked me to post it on my Facebook, saying he wanted to get $500 for them," Suzanne recounts. "The next morning, I told him 'Those buttons are sold and you have 89 on order.'"

"By the time Jake came home from school that day, he had already met his $500 goal. His two brothers, Nathan and Owen, jumped in immediately. It became a family thing. Three days later, they had raised $1,500 and in just over a month, their "Buttons for Ukraine" goals quickly rose from $3,000 to $5,000, then to $10,000. And they met that goal on the first weekend in April, one month after Jake made those first nine buttons.

"I ask them often if they want to stop and they ask if the conflict is over -- as that's when they'll stop," Suzanne shares.

As of April 4, Jake had reached his goal of $10,000 with "Buttons for Ukraine."

He now has a new goal of $20,000 and is almost there with $17,860 raised as of July 2022. Follow ButtonsforUkraine on Twitter.

Run for Ukraine

In Alberta, junior high school teacher Daylan Wizniuk decided to take his love of running to a fundraising level when he was moved by what he was seeing on the news about Ukraine.

"Growing up, I was surrounded by a variety of different Ukrainian traditions," explains Daylan. "I felt a personal desire to try to do something that would hopefully be of benefit to the people of Ukraine and the efforts going on over there. Also, my wife and I welcomed our first child in December, so seeing families torn apart hit pretty close to home and was tough to watch."

He continues, "So, we decided to try to do something. I'm an ultra marathon runner - I race several times a year of varying distances. That seemed like the best way to maybe get attention and draw in more people to potentially donate to this fundraising effort. We brainstormed [with] four towns [around Alberta] that have significant Ukrainian sites still."

Ultra marathon is defined as anything longer than the usual 42.2 km marathon. Daylan has been competing at this level for the past six years, after previously competing in marathons.

On April 2, he ran approximately 170 kilometres through four cities – Mundare, Vegreville, St. Paul, and Glendon - ending on the morning of Sunday, April 3. He estimates the fundraising feat involved a total of 17 or 18 hours of running, with breaks between cities.

Daylan has raised more than $6,000. Follow Daylan's efforts at @WizniukRuns.

Ukrainian Tattoos Flash Sale

Coming from a Ukrainian family, tattoo artist Heather Mellor, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, knew she absolutely had to help out. Heather used her artwork by offering flash sales, where clients could purchase her created tattoos and donations would go to the Canadian Red Cross Ukraine Humanitarian Appeal.

"My great grandparents came over from Ukraine," she explains. "I thought, 'what better incentive to get people to donate than to use my business as a tattoo artist to give people something to commemorate it and bring in good donations?'"

Drawing from her Ukrainian heritage, Heather created a total of 18 tattoo designs to offer to clients in this flash fundraising sale.

"Usually, I do custom work," she says, "but because I grew up with Ukrainian traditions, I was really inspired to come up with designs that took inspiration from the florals, the costumes they used to wear, embroidery and cross-stitching.

"I got over 250 inquiries about the flash pieces, and I ended up doing nine days of flash tattoos! I tattooed over 40 people in those nine days," Heather shares. "Usually, I don't see that many people in a whole month of work, but [during this fundraiser] I was tattooing 10-hour days, seeing about six clients a day -- it was hectic and busy but, overall, really worth it."

Her designs were so sought after that she also placed some prints for sale on her website to help address the demand.

"I couldn't tattoo all of the people who wanted tattoos, so I created three different prints, which was an opportunity for people who aren't in Winnipeg to participate," Heather notes. "I made approximately $5,000 in print sales."

All combined, she was able to make an incredible donation of $19,000 to the Ukraine Humanitarian Crisis Appeal thanks to this fundraising.

Her creative prints are still for sale, with donations going to the Canadian Red Cross, and can be found on her Instagram profile at @HeatherMellor.

We Love Ukraine Fundraiser

Linda Aldridge has been a volunteer with the Canadian Red Cross for just over a year. She says because of the 2016 Fort McMurray fires -- and that she has time to volunteer now that her kids are older -- she volunteered in emergency response, helping in the B.C. floods last fall.

"I've been a volunteer since February 2021, now that I have time," explains Linda, pictured right with her friend, Ganna Melekh, at the New York City Marathon. "One of the ladies I run with in my running club, Ganna, is from Kyiv, Ukraine and her mother and brother fled to the mountains from the city. She's my friend and she's telling me this -- I felt like saying 'sorry' wasn't enough for her when I have a relationship with the Red Cross."

Linda approached her running club to see how she could raise donations for the Canadian Red Cross Ukraine Humanitarian Crisis Appeal.

"I decided to have an event at the Legion. I basically held a fundraising party: hired a band, rented a room, invited everybody I knew to come. A lot of people stepped forward with silent auction items. It was quite emotionally overwhelming how people want to do something."

Linda held her event on March 12 and raised almost $16,000 by bringing together her running club, her volunteerism and even her mail carrier, who was the singer of the band, to make a memorable evening.

"The response was amazing," she adds. "A couple incredible things happened -- a person approached me to match the bid of an $3,000 value item in the silent auction, and one of my friends took an empty plastic jug around the room and told everyone to empty their wallets. They did so, and we had this massive cash collection. People just want to do something tangible."

Her Ukrainian friend was so touched by her efforts that she gifted Linda a necklace in gratitude.

"She gave me the most beautiful, beaded necklace that evening and told me I'm Ukrainian now. It was incredible. It was very emotional."

Round of applause

The Canadian Red Cross is grateful to these fundraisers, and every fundraiser across Canada, for taking the initiative to help support those affected by the ongoing conflict in Ukraine and surrounding countries. We give a thankful round of applause for your care, concern, energy and efforts to help.

Creating Spaces for Young Leaders

Over the past 10 years, the Rideau Hall Foundation (RHF) has worked with a variety of partners to encourage youth leadership. From Catapult Canada, a program focused on providing equity of access to learning opportunities for young Canadians, to Ingenious+, a new national youth innovation challenge, we have sought out ways to invest in our youth. But now is not the time to rest on our successes.

After two years of disrupted learning and lost experiences, it is more vital than ever that we work with partners in all sectors to create leadership opportunities for all of our young people, including groups who have traditionally been left behind when it comes to programs focused on youth leadership. Specifically, youth with limited family income, those living in rural areas, Indigenous youth and youth from underrepresented groups.

The RHF's new tagline, "Igniting our shared potential", articulates that bold vision for our collective future. Now is the time to invest in all of our young people, to dismantle every barrier to full participation and to create multiple pathways to engagement and leadership. In partnership with the Samara Centre for Democracy, the RHF studied the impact of the pandemic on youth democratic engagement. In Learning Loss as Civic Loss: Addressing the Generational Impact of the COVID-19 Pandemic on Youth Democratic Engagement, we looked at the state of youth civic learning and engagement, as well as the potential impacts—for them and for our nation—going forward. And we looked at how we could address those impacts.

One important takeaway is that we have to rethink how we define leadership and provide more accessible pathways to participation. What if we move away from creating individual leaders and focus instead on removing barriers for youth to engage locally and in support of their communities? By shifting the spotlight away from individuals to networks, neighbourhoods, and the overall collective, we start to move away from a leadership model that focuses on and rewards personal achievement. This alone might encourage a wider, more representative set of young Canadians to participate as creative organizers, decisionmakers, and active contributors in their local communities. Given the size, diversity, resources, strength of our industries and stability of our country, this approach stands to reinforce a uniquely "made in Canada" paradigm of leadership development that leverages Canada's many assets.

So many of our youth are already engaged in global equality, climate change, and racial justice issues that matter most to them: Faith Dickerson, who started Cuddles for Cancer; Vishal Vijay, who started EveryChildNow and raised over $100,000 to help children living in extreme poverty; and of course, Autumn Peltier, clean water and Indigenous rights activist, just to name a very few. Let's meet these young people – and the countless others innovating and engaging across the country and around the world – where they are, on their own terms, and work to remove any barriers to the transformative impact they can achieve.

The Rideau Hall Foundation is a registered national charity that celebrates what is best about Canada while working with partners to meaningfully improve lives and foster the conditions for more Canadians to succeed and thrive. This year, the RHF celebrates its 10th anniversary. Learn more at www.rhf-frh.ca.

Get To Know The Charity

Looking to make a donation? Assess where and how you give so every one of your hard-earned dollars has an impact.

There are 85,000 charities registered with the Canadian Revenue Agency (CRA), and it can be hard to know which organization needs your donations the most. And, according to a recent survey, Canadians are more generous than ever with more than half of those surveyed giving an average of $1,000 annually.

Whether it's helping to support community initiatives, protecting the environment or looking out for vulnerable animals, deciding which charity to support is an important choice, both personally and financially.

If your budget includes room for donations, here are five tips to ensure your money goes to the right organizations. Plus, what to know about the tax implications.

1) Make (and stick) to a plan

Decide what you'd like to give at the beginning of the year and try to avoid being swayed by the numerous requests received, be it from street canvassers, store clerks or a friend's birthday fundraiser, recommends Kate Bahen, managing director of Charity Intelligence Canada, a registered charity that assesses hundreds of Canadian charities.

"Think about what matters to you when you're giving," she says. And remember that "you have the right to say 'no thank you' without guilt, if bombarded by requests."

Once you set an annual amount, you can also allot a portion for spontaneous donations such as humanitarian emergencies. But Bahen suggests limiting cash donations that can't be accounted for via tax receipts, credit cards or bank accounts.

2) Get to know the charity

Make sure the cause aligns with your values, but that it also delivers on its mandate effectively, says Toronto lawyer Mark Blumberg, partner with Blumberg Segal LLP, who specializes in the non-profit and charity sector.

"A high-profile charity saving polar bears, for example, may be receiving a lot of attention, but there may be a smaller group doing similar work where your money can have greater impact," he says.

Volunteering is a way to see a charity's work first-hand, adds Blumberg. "It is helpful in giving donors some idea of how effective the group is," he says.

Researching a charity's various functions, including fundraising, activities and programming, can provide insights.

You can also look to outside resources that rate charity effectiveness including Charity Intelligence, Charity Data, Charity Central, Charity Navigator, as well as publications such as Maclean's and MoneySense.

3) Ask questions about impact

Despite the information available, measuring impact is a challenge, warns Blumberg.

For example, he says, size and notoriety of a charity does not necessarily equal greatest impact. Statistics, Blumberg notes, can also be misleading. For example, communicating the number of people a program reached does not explain how they were assisted.

Given this, don't be afraid to ask the tough questions to help you get a better idea of how the charity is living up to its mandate and objectives, adds Bahen.

"Good charities will want you to know how they spend your money and the results they achieve," she says.

4) Be aware of red flags

Consider it a red flag if a charity isn't registered with the CRA, doesn't have a website or contact info for a physical address or accepts cash donations only. Watch out for pushy fundraising tactics as well, such as canvassers insisting you should sign up as a donor right away, rather than taking information and giving it some thought.

From a tax perspective, make sure donations are eligible for a tax receipt that is accepted by the CRA, adds FCPA Bruce Ball, CPA Canada's vice-president of taxation.

"The key is whether the receipt looks like the CRA examples as there is a requirement to produce receipts in that form,” he says.

When giving large donations, the CRA may require additional information such as proof of payment, adds Ball. “Keep this on hand at the time the gift is made rather than finding it later,” he says.

5) Review documentation

Documentation such as financial statements and annual reports—accessible via a charity’s website, with details also available through the CRA and some charity watchdogs—give clearer insight into a charity’s activity.

Though not required for Canadian charities, audited financial statements, which include accompanying notes and the auditor’s opinion, provide the most transparency, says lawyer Rayna Shienfield, principal, corporate oversight and governance for CPA Canada.

When reviewing financial statements, keep in mind that low administrative costs—which include supplies and equipment, accounting services and funding applications—do not necessarily equal a more efficiently run charity, explains Shienfield.

“There is a misconception that the less money spent on overhead, the better, but it takes money to effectively operate a charity,” she says. “Donors can, and should, look to these documents to ensure that overhead spending is within a reasonable range, but the key here is reasonable.”

With a little research, you can be confident that your donations are used effectively for a cause you believe in.

“There are far more excellent charities out there and [prospective] donors have good ‘spidey senses.’ Listen to your gut and don’t tolerate pressure tactics,” says Shienfield.

Fighting For Better Mental Health Among Indigenous Youth

Linnea Dick opens up about dealing with mental health issues as a young Indigenous person, the factors that can lead to poor mental health, how she got better, and what she is doing to help a new generation achieve a happier and more meaningful life.

"I think if I could funnel it into one big thing that really impacted me as a youth, it's that we're not given very many opportunities to find ourselves, whether in a rural or urban setting, whether that be the medical system, the education system, in the diversity of recreational activities, it's just not there [for many Indigenous youth]," said Linnea Dick.

Dick works for We Matter, a national, Indigenous-led campaign targeting young people with suicide awareness and prevention. According to the Canadian Institute for Health, Indigenous youth are five to six times more likely to commit suicide than their non-Indigenous peers. Part of the We Matter campaign involves over 200 videos submitted by youth across the country, sharing their own struggles and inspiring messages to other youth.

"I fell into depression. I felt so unworthy ... I felt unworthy of the people who were there to support me. I felt unworthy of success. And, I kind of just accepted that as my fate because of those lack of resources. Because I wasn't able to be the unique and cultural person that I was raised to be."

Dick, who's now 30, struggled with eating disorders, depression, and addiction. She said the worst point of her alcoholism was at 14-years-old and describes herself as a "black out drunk," trying to escape her pain. Dick says her mental health issues stem from being sexually abused as a child by someone she trusted.

Dick describes what she was going through as "quite challenging."

"It presented this question of, is my life worth it? Am I worthy enough to be here?"

Place and its impact on mental health

"It was hard not to feel lost because no matter where I was, I was missing a huge part of myself," says Dick.

At the time, Dick lived in British Columbia, growing up mainly in Alert Bay, Victoria and Vancouver.

"I think on one side of things, it was really difficult living in the city because I had this sense of who I was, my identity, my culture, my traditions, and it not really having a place in my life in an urban setting.

"But, on the other hand, living in a small town like Alert Bay, which is quite isolated...I felt like I wasn't living up to my full potential because there was such a lack of resources there," says Dick.

"It was hard not to feel lost because no matter where I was, I was missing a huge part of myself."

Linnea Dick

Social Media & Outreach Coordinator at We Matter.

Dick says she wasn't offered any sort of help for her addiction or depression by professionals, not even after drinking and blacking out at a High School dance and having the ambulance called.

In one incident, during a routine check up, Dick says she broke down and cried in the doctor's office. The doctor suggested she go on antidepressants.

"I was raised very traditionally with my father, with the Kwakwaka'wakw traditions...The health care professional didn't understand any of that.

"I think there is a place where some people might benefit from the antidepressants, but having a choice is so important. Had I sat there and he said, what do you feel you need? What is going to make you feel better? My whole experience would have been different, but instead I felt ashamed."

Factoring in gender and intergenerational trauma

In talking about place as identity, Dick also says that "apart from experiencing those challenges of being Indigenous and not understanding the society that's built around us and doesn't speak to who we are as people," she also felt belittled as a young woman, exacerbated by having been sexually abused.

"I was very fearful. I walked around everyday with my head low. I was afraid that someone would say something racist to me, that someone would judge me, that I might be sexually harassed, and I didn't have the voice to speak up against it because I didn't know I was allowed to."

To overcome generations and generations of genocide, of abuse, of violence, of oppression, it doesn't happen easily. I was born with a weight on my shoulders and no one to teach me how to navigate through it. - Linnea Dick

Dick also talks about the role of inter-generational trauma as one of the many layers connected to her experience with mental health struggles.

"A lot of society has this attitude of get over it. We can't just get over it and its been scientifically proven that we hold that trauma in our DNA.

"To overcome generations and generations of genocide, of abuse, of violence, of oppression, it doesn't happen easily. I was born with a weight on my shoulders and no one to teach me how to navigate through it. Our parents and our grandparents were so strong but we're still learning how to be empowered."

Dick's been sober for six years now and credits finding her voice in activism and in meeting a friend and mentor who was sober for 15 years.

"I think that in a lot of ways, that's why a lot of Indigenous people are taking back their sobriety because, as we begin to heal every generation, we're able to let go of those mechanisms that were put in place through colonisation that told us this is how we deal with things.

"We're taking back who we are as people, and just looking around and seeing all those amazing people, is what really set me on the right path..."

ESTATE PLANNING

Recording Estate Planning in the Digital Age

Audio-visual communication technology has become a powerful tool for many estate practitioners in light of COVID-19. One of the most prominent examples of how this technology has enhanced our ability to practice law is the execution of testamentary instruments - since 2020, lawyers have been able to assist clients remotely using audio-visual platforms like Zoom. With the amendments to the Succession Law Reform Act made permanent in 2021, it appears that audio-visual communication technology is here to stay for the wills and estates bar.¹

In this digital age, there is another way that estate lawyers can, and perhaps should, incorporate audio-visual technology into their practices - by video recording meetings with clients. The primary use for such video is in estate litigation - video recordings can preserve meaningful evidence of

(1) lawyers' meetings with the testator, including the intake process and the testator's estate planning instructions, and (2) the execution of the client's testamentary instruments in compliance with the necessary formalities. Experts also agree that making video recordings "in situations in which there may be doubt about the testator's capacity, or situations in which family members and others may want to contest the will," is good practice.²

While the admissibility of such evidence in estate proceedings is not addressed in the SLRA or the Rules of Civil Procedure,³ this should not deter practitioners from updating their practice.

Video recordings have been admitted during contested estate proceedings in Alberta,⁴ and the Manitoba Law Reform Commission has expressly endorsed video recordings of the execution of a will, which are considered "admissible in a contested will action as evidence of testamentary intention and capacity, knowledge and approval, and due form and execution."⁵

In 2021, the Ontario Superior Court of Justice also admitted surreptitiously recorded phone conversations into evidence during power of attorney litigation, both confirming that a "general inclusionary rule" applies in civil cases and demonstrating reluctance to decide issues relating to capacity using an incomplete record.⁶

If a lawyer does wish to update their practice to include video recordings, it may be helpful to keep the following points in mind:

- Estate litigation is not always foreseeable. On this basis, it may be advisable to make video recordings a consistent part of a wills and estates practice, rather than only utilizing video recordings when there are immediate concerns about capacity or potential litigation.
- The client must be informed whenever a meeting is being recorded. Rule 7.2-3 of the Rules

Suzana Popovic-Montag
Managing Partner of Hull & Hull LLP

of Professional Conduct expressly provides: "A lawyer shall not use any device to record a conversation between the lawyer and a client or another legal practitioner, even if lawful, without first informing the other person of the intention to do so." If a party is aware that he or she is being recorded, the recording may also have more probative value in estate proceedings.⁷

- Before incorporating video recordings into one's legal practice, it is advisable to ensure that the client intake process is thorough and professionally sound. Otherwise, if the intake process is inadequate, videotaping a client interview may only end up providing evidence of the lawyer's negligence.⁸ Recording a meeting is not intended to serve as a substitute for best practices, but instead to supplement them.
- If a client meeting is recorded, notes and memos regarding the meeting still ought to be prepared. If estate litigation ensues, the lawyer may be called upon to give further evidence about the client meeting beyond what the video recorded, as "[t]here are subtleties and nuances in behaviour that may not be fully captured by the video and audio. The angle, the quality, the view, and other factors related to the physical and technical act of recording can affect the value of the recording as evidence.”⁹

- If the initial client meeting is recorded, it may also be prudent to record all meetings leading up to the execution of a particular testamentary instrument by the client. If estate litigation occurs, the court may prefer to have access to video of all of the client meetings, rather than be limited to what the lawyer thought would be most relevant to record.¹⁰

Finally, while video recording a client’s testamentary instructions could prove useful in the event of a will challenge, a recording will not constitute prima facie proof of a testator’s capacity, as confirmed in Schell Estate (Re).¹¹ In this case, the executors of an estate sought summary dismissal of a will challenge, and admitted video recordings of the testatrix meeting with the lawyer prior to executing the disputed will, in addition to video of the will being executed. The Court dismissed the application for summary dismissal, holding:

[84] The video is an important piece of evidence, but it is not by itself conclusive to a degree that makes the Applicant’s position unassailable. It is not a basis for a fair and just determination of the issues. In fact, the video may raise questions about the strength of the Applicants’ case ... The trial judge will assess the degree to which Eileen’s demeanour, responses and the tenor of the conversation in the video reveal (or do not reveal) Eileen’s mental condition and free choice in her estate intentions.

In this new digital age of practice, it may only be a matter of time until video recording the estate planning process is standard procedure. Now is an apt time for the wills and estates bar to consider how best to professionalize the intake of client information and confirmation of client instructions utilizing audio-visual technology.

Palliative Care Is Not Quite What You Think

For many Canadians, discussing death, dying, and end-of-life care can be challenging; something to be avoided. Yet an open conversation with loved ones and health care providers can alleviate fear and help to initiate a stage of care that supports symptom management and the emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs as we near the end-of-life.

To most, palliative care is something done only at the end-of-life, but it is so much more than that. It means to provide comfort. And providing comfort should be central to how care is delivered.

Historically, palliative care has only been offered to people in the last weeks or months of life, when there was no treatment left to explore. The focus of care would then shift from cure to comfort. But now, people diagnosed with a life-limiting illness can live many years with their condition, and a palliative approach to care is greatly beneficial to their quality of life. This approach is also proven to reduce anxiety and improve pain and symptom management at all stages of life.

Open conversations that enable people to address their emotional or spiritual concerns are part of a palliative approach to care. These conversations help with goal setting and advance care planning. It is a time for people to consider their values and wishes, and to let their loved ones and medical team know what kind of health and personal care they would want in the future if they were unable to speak for themselves.

As the illness progresses, individuals and families can make care decisions that reflect their personal desires and goals, including dying at home if that is their wish. What matters most to one person is often very different from the wishes of another. Their goals are different, and their care plan should reflect that.

Providing palliative care where the focus is on the person, rather than the disease, fundamentally changes care to maximize both quality and length of life. It ensures that a good death is part of a person's good life lived.

Bruyère, an academic health care organization located in Ottawa, is the home of the Pan-Canadian Palliative Care Research Collaborative; a network of over 100 researchers and other key community members. Co-chaired by Bruyère clinical researcher Dr. James Downar, this network recently received a multi-million-dollar grant from Health Canada to transform palliative care delivery for patients and caregivers by studying and implementing new strategies for pain management, existential distress, novel therapies for symptom management, equitable models of care, and other priorities in palliative care across Canada. This important investment underscores the quality of the research and expertise that exists at Bruyère and ensures that our patients are the first to benefit from new treatments.

Whether it's new tools, innovative models of care, or educational resources, the Bruyère Research Institute, is dedicated to advancing palliative care to improve the experience for patients their loved ones, and our care teams.

"In medicine, we often try to save lives, but we also need to focus on comfort and quality of life. Just as it's important to get the way we come into the world right – to have a good birth – it's critical we get death and dying right, too. With an integrated palliative approach to care, patients will live better and die well." - Dr. James Downar, Clinical Research Chair in Palliative and End of Life Care, University of Ottawa and Co-Chair, Pan-Canadian Palliative Care Research Collaborative.

Keira becomes Champion Child

It's tough raising a young girl these days, with social media and advertising creating unrealistic expectations that can impact a child's self esteem. For Melanie Davlut, there are even more worries about how her 11-year-old daughter Keira sees herself.

"When she looks in the mirror, the mirror image is distorted. That is going to be a challenge for her growing up to know that what she sees in the mirror isn't what she really looks like," says Melanie.

That's because Keira continues to have limited vision – a remnant of her craniosynostosis at birth.

"When she was born, we noticed her right eye was a lot smaller and the left eye seemed more open and her head seemed a bit bulgy, so we talked to our pediatrician and he said it could be just from the c-section delivery and to wait and see."

But by the two-week baby check up, Keira's pediatrician had determined that she needed an MRI and X-ray at HSC Winnipeg Children's Hospital. The MRI showed Keira's brain was healthy, but the X-ray showed one of the five sutures in her skull was fused.

In infancy the sutures of the skull should be flexible to allow the brain to grow and protect the brain from minor impact such as when an infant is learning to lift her head, roll over, or sit up. But Keira was diagnosed with left coronal craniosynostosis, which means a suture in her skull was fused at birth, causing her head shape to grow abnormally.

Craniosynostosis happens in one in every 2,000 births. Without surgery, it can cause vision loss, facial disfigurement and developmental problems due to the skull putting pressure on the growing brain.

Keira had her first surgery in September 2011 at just 9 months old. This surgery involved an incision across the scalp and placement of re-absorbable plates to open the fusion, relieve pressure and support the shaping of her skull to naturally fuse back together as she grows. She then followed up with an ear, nose and throat doctor at the hospital for ear tubes and adenoid surgery.

She had another surgery in 2018 which focused on an incision in her forehead to reduce an area of the skull that was sinking. Keira regularly follows up with several doctors at Children's Hospital as she grows because her skull is constantly changing. This includes seeing a dental physician as her jaw is too small for her adult teeth coming in, a plastic surgeon for consult on additional facial surgeries, and an ophthalmologist at the hospital for her ongoing vision challenges.

"The last surgery was difficult for her as it took about 6 months to heal. The first month was the hardest being off school but she had some friends come for play dates...they just had to do quiet activities with her," says Melanie.

Melanie says all the doctors and nurses at Children's Hospital have provided excellent care to Keira.

"After her surgeries the PICU and CK3 ward staff are always exceptional. Without them Keira wouldn't be the vibrant young girl she is."

Despite the challenging start to life and the ongoing visits to Children's Hospital in her first 11 years of life, Keira is a confident girl who loves learning piano, performing in musical theatre, playing Roblox online with school friends, and doing anything she can to support Children's Hospital Foundation of Manitoba. Her DQ dance for Children's Miracle Network in 2020 was even featured on national social media channels to help raise funds for local children's hospitals.

Melanie says Keira understands her condition and takes it in stride as part of who she is. "We hope this understanding and confidence continues into her teens. She is active, a performer, and really her own person," says Melanie.

Dave Leman's Long Lasting Nature Legacy

Recalling the beauty of glacier-fed rivers and the sweet smell of Douglas fir trees and prairie grasses like fescue, Dave Leman of Prince George, B.C. has been passionate about wildlife and conservation for as long as he can remember.

Growing up near the Bow River in Calgary, at the time a small city of 320,000 people, Dave would play outside near his home by the escarpment over the Bow River catching leopard frogs (which he now feels bad about) and delighting in aspen trees, bobcats and deer.

Thanks to words of support and encouragement — “We need people like you,” his late father would tell him — Dave has always had a genuine awareness and concern for the environment.

With deep admiration and faith, Dave has been a financial supporter of WWF-Canada for 32 years. “We need to care about the world, both other humans and our fellow living things,” says Dave, who decided years ago to leave a gift for wildlife in his Will through WWF-Canada.

His love of wildlife and nature stretches across the globe. During one of his past trips to Tanzania, Dave recalls seeing a female elephant with a broken leg being supported by two other elephants while food was brought to her.

It was amazing to witness their intelligence, love and emotive intent as the elephants worked together to care for their injured family member, he says.

But one fond memory stands out as one of his most memorable wildlife encounters — while doing grad work in southern Alberta, Dave and a colleague were standing in a windswept shortgrass prairie searching for a den of swift foxes when a herd of wild horses came thundering towards them.

Both frightening and beautiful, this moment left them speechless and in awe of the wonders of nature.

It is wise for us to think and care not just after ourselves, Dave says, but for those coming after us. Becoming emotional, he says he can't imagine a world without rhinos (black rhinos are his favourite mammal) and can't bear the thought of his future grandchildren asking why he didn't do more to save

Allocating a portion of his Will to WWF-Canada is his way of extending his love for wildlife beyond his lifetime and passing on a healthier planet for those who come after him.

Reversing the damage and destruction that wildlife and their habitats have endured is a monumental task, but not an impossible one. Like Dave, you too have the power to take care of your loved ones and make a difference for the causes you care about through your Will.

If you believe in safeguarding wildlife and nature for future generations, consider leaving a long-lasting gift in your Will or estate plan to help grow the vital conservation work that WWF-Canada is currently doing.

Leaving a gift in your Will costs nothing now but ensures your impact and support for conservation within Canada will continue.

What is Decolonization?

Let me be clear right from the beginning: I AM NOT AN EXPERT. I am a white privileged woman, entering into this conversation with a great deal of trepidation and a certain amount of anxiety. My goal is that we will learn and ask some questions together, in hopes that this article will help all of us to look at our world and work in a different way. I will inevitably ruffle some feathers and say something stupid – but I hope that we can enter this conversation bravely and be willing to learn (and unlearn) together.

Phew... even that was stressful to write!

OK – with that said, let's take a look at the idea of de-colonization and what it means for us personally and for the social serving sector.

What is decolonization? To understand that term, let's first understand what colonization means:

Colonization: the action or process of settling among and establishing control over the indigenous people of an area; the action of appropriating a place or domain for one's own use.

In Canada, colonization was accomplished through various means: removing Indigenous people from their land, “removing the Indian from the child” through residential schools, banning cultural practices and ceremonies, outlawing Indigenous languages, the intentional spread of disease, writing laws that treated Indigenous people as animals and the list goes on. It is not unreasonable to say that in Canada, genocide was perpetrated through the colonization process.

Unfortunately, we cannot shake our heads and say that it all happened “back then.”

Colonization, and the effects of colonization, are still in effect.

Consider:

- the lack of clean water on reserves,
- the lack of health care and services on reserves,
- the continued removal of Indigenous children from their homes and community,
- the lack of resources for Indigenous communities to educate their children in their language and cultural practices,
- the stigma and racism that Indigenous people experience every day in every community across Canada... and the list goes on.

Patriarchal actions of Canada towards First Nations are still happening today.

So, what is decolonization?

The dictionary definition is: the action or process of a state withdrawing from a former colony, leaving it independent. Huh. Somehow that seems inadequate. There's got to be more to this than just withdrawal. What about all the damage that has been done? The generational trauma? The effects of economic and cultural racism? What about restitution?

For most of us in the social serving sector – and really anyone who has a conscience – we will want to address this problem. But is it our problem to fix? There is a big difference between “fixing” a problem and being held accountable and stepping up to be part of the solution.

Reconciliation is the process by which relationships are restored. This is the work of the National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation (nctr.ca). It is also the work of each one of us – to learn and unlearn, to recognize the colonial lens through which we see and to find ways, both professionally and personally to decolonize. This is a process – one that requires guidance and leadership from Indigenous people. We must learn from them before we can consider what needs to be done. A good way to start is to read and educate ourselves about Indigenous people. Here are a couple resources:

- University of Calgary: Indigenous Canada Course (free)
- Four Seasons of Reconciliation Course: <https://www.reconciliationeducation.ca/>

I encourage you to ask yourself how your beliefs and mindset about Indigenous people affect the way you work, live and interact with your community. In what areas are you affected by a colonial lens? Feel free to contact me with your thoughts – let's be brave together!

We all have skeletons in our closet. Most of us would be quite content to leave them there, in the dark. It is so much less painful to ignore them.

The organization I work for is almost 150 years old. Our roots are firmly planted in colonization. But, whether an organization is 150 or 15 years old, there are undoubtedly policies, actions or statements that have been hidden away in shame. The question is, what do we do with them? Do we pull them into the light of day and display them for all to see or do we try to bury them deeper in hopes that they are never found? Neither option is appealing and both can result in a loss of reputation, supporters and funding.

With our 150-year history – and with volumes of archives and photos to sift through – we have decided to hire an outside archivist to do a deep dive into our history. All the skeletons will be pulled into the open, at which time we can carefully decide what to do with them. Will there be some kind of public statement of our role in colonialism? Probably. Will there be acts of reconciliation and restitution? Undoubtedly. Will there be humble requests for forgiveness? Absolutely.

Part of our history is our beautiful heritage brick building, built in 1891. It has housed children and seniors and been the centre of our organization. We love it and have taken great efforts to maintain it as an important part of our history. Unfortunately, it also bears a strong resemblance to many of the residential schools that were built in the same era. How many Indigenous people have been triggered just by looking at our building? We aren't going to demolish the building – so what can we do to make it a more welcoming space for Indigenous people? This is a question we are mulling over.

- How do your physical spaces welcome Indigenous people?
- Is there more that you can do to create a welcoming and safe place?

Many organizations have written land acknowledgements in an effort to honour the Indigenous people of their area.

However, this also has some controversy attached to it. Is acknowledging that you have forcefully taken something that isn't yours enough? Doesn't there need to be restitution or at the very least, an apology? In any other context, we would be paying rent to the land owner to live and work on their property. Does this need to be a part of the reconciliation process?

I think the concept of reconciliation can mean many different things. My ideas of how to make amends will be very different from yours, and likely also very different from the Indigenous community.

Therefore, while we can ask all kinds of questions about our history, our physical spaces, and how we live and work in our community, the core of the reconciliation process needs to be guided and led by the Indigenous community. "Nothing for us without us."

Probably the most important thing we can do as an organization is to work in partnership with an Indigenous elder or knowledge keeper to guide us in this process. And let me be clear – we need to generously compensate this person for the work they are going to do with us. We cannot expect the Indigenous community to do the work for us – we must be ready to dig in, face the skeletons and come up with an appropriate way to make restitution. This is OUR work to do – with the guidance and direction of the people most impacted by our colonial history.

- What can you do to learn more about your organizational history?
- What kind of skeletons need to be dealt with?
- Do you have Indigenous partners who can guide you with this process?

"We've always done it that way." This statement is commonly heard in all social profit organizations. It is so much easier to do things as they have always been done than to change. However, it is also an opportunity to explore why we have always done it "that way." If we dig a bit deeper, we find that traditions or legacies are often rooted in paternalism and colonialism (as well as other "isms" like ableism, heteronormative-ism etc). Changing is HARD WORK, but changing how an organization does things is particularly difficult, especially when processes and policies have been around for a long time. However, the work needs to be done.

One of the first questions we asked ourselves when we started the process of decolonization is how many of our staff and clients are Indigenous. We were surprised how low the numbers were in both categories. For an organization that touches over 2,000 lives, a very small percentage are Indigenous. So then, we had to ask ourselves WHY?

- Are our services not relevant or needed by Indigenous people?
- Are Indigenous people receiving similar services from Indigenous-led organizations?

The answer to both questions was no. That made it clear to us that Indigenous people are not accessing our services for other reasons. Some potential barriers include:

- Our building looks like a residential school
- Our Christian heritage
- The way we provide services may not be in line with Indigenous culture
- Our application/intake process

We also had to consider that the predominantly white faces of our staff could be a barrier. The percentage of Indigenous staff was even smaller than clients, so we needed to ask some questions about that too:

- Do we have a culturally safe place to work?
- Do we value diversity?
- Do we have barriers that make it difficult for Indigenous people to apply for jobs?

As you can see, at this point, there are a lot of questions and not a lot of answers.

As we move forward in this process, I think the most important part is our attitude. We need to be humble and vulnerable, willing to look at the hard things that we have done and look for culturally appropriate ways to make amends. Are we going to make mistakes? YES! Are we going to offend people? Undoubtedly. Is the work going to be hard? Very much so. Is it worth it? A resounding yes!

Thanks for joining me in this conversation about decolonization. Please share your thoughts and experiences at jlinka@cridge.org.

Let's all be brave and humble together on this journey towards reconciliation.

WILLS

Where to Keep Your Will

We are reminded repeatedly of the importance of MAKING a will. However, we often don't give enough thought to where we should KEEP our will. The best estate plan is of little use if the will cannot be located, and located quickly, upon death.

(Recall Seinfeld's rant about the car rental agency TAKING a reservation, but not HOLDING the reservation.)

There are different schools of thought about where you should store your will. One view is to leave it with the drafting solicitor. They would be able to ensure that it is not lost or accidentally destroyed, and will be readily available when needed. There may or may not be a fee for such storage, depending on the lawyer. The downside of storing the will with the lawyer is that the lawyer may die, retire or move. Normally, the lawyer or their successor would notify you in such a case, but this is not always effective.

Another view is to keep it with your personal papers: ideally in a fireproof box in your home. (Keeping a will in a bank's safety deposit box can lead to difficulty when your next of kin or estate trustee tries to retrieve it, as no one will have immediate authority to access the safety deposit box.) Keeping the will at home, however, means that it might be accessed by others during your lifetime. If confidentiality is a concern, this might not be your best option.

A third option is to give your will to the named estate trustee. This ensures that they will have access to it immediately when needed. Steps will need to be taken in the event that you want to update your will, or in the event that your estate trustee predeceases.

A further option is to deposit the will with the court. Rule 74.02 of the

Paul Trudelle
Partner of Hull & Hull LLP

Rules of Civil Procedure sets out a mechanism for filing the will with the registrar of the court. Upon the testator's death, any person can get a copy of the will, and the estate trustee(s) may request the delivery of the will to themselves or their lawyer.

Keep in mind that if the will was last in your possession, and cannot be located upon your death, there is a presumption that you have revoked the will.

In either case, you should advise your estate trustee or next of kin as to where the will is kept.

Thanks for reading.

Canada Steps Up Support For Ukraine

The war in Ukraine has led to the fastest-growing level of displacement in Europe since the Second World War. Individuals and families — the overwhelming majority of whom are women and children — have been forced to flee their homes, seeking safety in surrounding countries such as Poland and Moldova. Many have also found refuge here in Canada.

For those who have remained within Ukraine, they are faced with ongoing attacks in civilian populated areas, the destruction of critical infrastructure, hampered access to basic services and widespread trauma.

UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, has been working in Ukraine since 1994, alongside local authorities, partners and community organizations to deliver protection and humanitarian assistance to people in need. Nearly three million people were already in need of humanitarian support in Ukraine before the start of the war — a figure that has now increased five-fold since the start of war. As the needs and scale of this unfolding crisis continue to surge, UNHCR has seen a heartfelt outpouring of generosity in support of our efforts to help those whose lives have been uprooted by this ongoing humanitarian emergency.

Artists and entrepreneurs from across Canada have been galvanized to take inspiring action, using their creative talents and business acumen to help raise funds and awareness in support of UNHCR's emergency work in Ukraine. Here are a few of their stories:

Paris Jewellers

Alberta-based Paris Jewellers committed to donating $25,000 plus 10% of their sales as part of their fundraising campaign, which went on to raise $50,000 for UNHCR Canada.

The humanitarian crisis struck a deeply personal chord for the family-owned brand. Having immigrated to Canada from Vietnam, sisters and co-owners Chau and Trang, along with their mother, felt incredibly moved to start a fundraiser after hearing about the devastation of those fleeing Ukraine.

They recalled their own personal experience of having to move to a foreign country without the language skills, and then being able to reach their version of the Canadian dream with ambition, strength and tenacity.

“Some of our extended family members came as refugees. We can't imagine being displaced and not having somewhere to call home anymore. We feel so deeply for the women and mothers who've been displaced because their partners have to stay back and fight.

Our customers know that one of our core values at Paris Jewellers is community support. With so many of our friends' and customers' extended families being displaced and unsure of where their next meal is coming from or where they'll sleep tonight — we, as a company and individuals, want to do what we can to help Ukrainians.”

IAM YOGA

Sadaf Hosseini, of Toronto-based IAM YOGA, had no idea what to expect when they decided to hold a Yoga for Ukraine class to raise funds for UNHCR Canada. The response was overwhelming, and even had a waitlist. The Yoga for Ukraine class along with a few other community donations raised $1,234 for UNHCR's Ukraine emergency fund.

Sadaf's business model includes helping the community at large, and she felt that her yoga fundraiser was a way to give back. Growing up in Iran, Sadaf was forced to leave her home under unstable and unsafe circumstances, and this naturally made her feel for the people of Ukraine and the suffering they are going through at this time. Sadaf explains,

“I grew up in Iran and was personally affected by the Iran-Iraq War. It's a terrible thing, to be forced to leave your home, to feel so unstable and unsafe. I know what that's like, so naturally my heart went out to the people of Ukraine when their home was invaded.

When I bought my business in April of 2021, I was excited to be able to use the platform I'd acquired to make a difference — holding a class to raise funds for Ukrainians was an automatic decision for me. I've seen war, I've experienced it — now that I can do something to help, I should.”

Peace Collective

Peace Collective has been contributing to a variety of causes since its inception. The mission of the Toronto-based apparel brand is to make you look good while giving back to the causes you believe in. This socially conscious apparel company has been supporting UNHCR through unique initiatives since 2020.

Compelled to act, Peace Collective created a customized sweatshirt to raise money for UNHCR's work in Ukraine and have raised around $7,500 towards the relief efforts in the country and surrounding areas.

Peace Collective founder Yanal Dhailieh said he has seen a wonderful and grateful response from their customers for getting involved.

"When the war broke out in Ukraine we felt that we had to do our part. The situation hit close to home as one of our team members has family in Ukraine and we could see how much the war impacted her and the people she loved."

Jeff Dillon

As Jeff Dillon watched the invasion of Ukraine on the news with increasing alarm, he was struck by the human devastation as millions fled to the borders to escape the war. Called to action, the Waterloo, Ontario-based artist created a painting in support of Ukraine, choosing a field of sunflowers against a blue sky and titling it "Solidarity".

"When I was painting 'Solidarity', I thought of the people of Ukraine. I wanted the image to be beautiful and hopeful. When I completed the painting, I felt lifted up, and grateful for the opportunity to use my art to help others. Despite the real boundaries of our countries, I truly believe charity has no borders."

Jeff says he was inspired to raise funds on behalf of UNHCR because of its well-known history of helping refugees and safeguarding human rights worldwide. It was important to him that the charity he chose was familiar with the issues, could rally the needed international support, and could work with neighbouring countries to respond quickly. He held an auction for "Solidarity," and supporters turned out in force. The auction raised nearly $20,000 for UNHCR's Ukraine response.

Envy of None

Canadian-American rock band Envy of None features the musical stylings of Alex Lifeson, a founding member of Rush, Coney Hatch founder/bassist Andy Curran, accomplished producer and engineer Alfio Annibalini, and singer-songwriter Maiah Wynne. They decided to dedicate a single on their self-titled debut album to raise funds for the emergency in Ukraine.

"I have always believed that music can make a difference, and I thought we could use the song 'Enemy' to try to raise money. I feel truly lucky to be a part of a team that cares a lot", says Wynne. "Everyone jumped on board immediately, and so many people along the way have chipped in. It means so much to be able to help and to use our music to do something good... Our hearts have been aching for those in Ukraine and we send our love to all those affected."

Envy of None was compelled to choose UNHCR as the organization to donate towards after being contacted by friends in fellow rock band Big Wreck, when they launched a similar campaign. Looking to find a way to help, they connected with Big Wreck's manager, who highly recommended UNHCR. Envy of None decided to follow in their footsteps.

"How does one become motivated into action? What is the breaking point of inaction? When does the daily outrage of horrific events become intolerable?" asked Lifeson.

"Thoughts and prayers don't cut it. They never do. Direct action is what's necessary. The presence of UNHCR and their tireless efforts supporting the displaced and traumatized victims of this senseless, barbaric war is a testament of such action. As long as this nightmare continues, we must remain resolute in our support."

The band has raised close to $100,000 in support of Ukraine — and the total continues to rise. The band says the most rewarding part of their fundraising campaign has been having their fans supporting the cause, pre-ordering the single and sending kind messages of encouragement.

Why Philanthropy Needs a New Story

The story of philanthropy is not static; it evolves with every new challenge faced. Recently, the calls for reform have been loud and clear – to unlock the billions locked up in endowments, remove “direction and control,” and shift to more reciprocal relationships.

For many, the word “philanthropist” conjures up old-timey images of the golden-hearted titan of industry or the giant in the community. Western culture is stamped with large gestures of private generosity in pursuit of the public good, immortalized on buildings and in statues. The star of this story is benevolent, selfless even, a hero.

But this is simply not true. It is a tall tale that does more harm than good, and it is in need of a major rewrite.

Earlier this year, Toronto Foundation hosted a dialogue between Senator Ratna Omidvar and Community Foundations of Canada CEO Andrew Chunilall on the state of philanthropy. It was one of a series of events that have popped up in a short period of time that challenge conventional norms of philanthropy. At this gathering and others, the calls for reform were loud and clear, and we welcome them.

In Canada today, there is more than $116 billion locked up in the endowments of private and public foundations. This means that wealthy individuals and families receive significant personal tax benefits for negligible community return. The private markets gain as these dollars are typically invested in traditional financial vehicles. But the charitable value that ensues will take decades to be realized.

Endowments are the sacred cow of philanthropy. For years no one could touch them. In fact, even raising the question was considered impolite. Why is this when community benefit is what philanthropy is supposed to be about?

During the virtual conversation, Yonis Hassan, co-founder and CEO of the Justice Fund, nailed it when, through the online chat, he referred to endowments as “citadels of perpetuity.” The military reference is apt, as entrenchment is real and unyielding when it comes to the deep roots of institutional philanthropy. Emerging leaders like Hassan are helping to break down these walls by asking questions that had previously been off-limits.

The legal construct of “direction and control” also came up in the conversation. It ensures that a small group of insiders decides what’s worthy of charitable donations and what isn’t. The very definition of charity is being challenged, and it’s high time. The last time it was considered was more than a century ago.

At the core of this story is a paradox. As endowments grow, so does inequality. The gap between the wealthiest in our society and the poorest is also on an upward trajectory – two co-existing realities that cannot be ignored.

To be clear, we are not casting the philanthropist in the role of villain.

Julia Howell

Toronto Foundation's Chief Program Officer

Canada is blessed with a growing community of givers who are rebalancing the relationship between personal interest and collective impact. They're doing it in creative ways by shifting the power dynamic between giver and recipient so that community can decide its own future rather than relying on the false altruism of others. And they're reshaping the levers of capitalism by measuring return on investment more expansively to include social and environmental benefit as well as financial. We need more of this. A lot more.

At another recent gathering, the inaugural Black Leadership in Social Impact Summit, philanthropy was once again in the firing line. Liban Abokor, executive director of Youth LEAPS and founding member of the working group for the Foundation for Black Communities, told the crowd that he “despises” the word “philanthropy.”

“Names matter,” Abokor said. He talked about the need for a shift from (benevolent) giver and (lesser-than) receiver to a new reciprocal relationship. “I have never given or donated. I have returned ... so what I've taken from the pot, I've simply returned, for others to benefit as well.”

This idea of reciprocity is not new. It is core to Indigenous worldviews, where we see the roots of philanthropy if we care to look. Canada played host to The Philanthropy Workshop in March, the first time our country has welcomed this global network of givers. On the stage was another refreshing and powerful voice in philanthropy: Kris Archie, CEO of The Circle on Philanthropy and Aboriginal Peoples in Canada (The Circle), had the audience spellbound. A natural-born storyteller, Archie is driving the decolonization of philanthropy through her clarity of vision and gift for public speaking. At the heart of this work is the deep understanding that everything is relational, that people and planet are symbiotic. Archie posed a fundamental question for philanthropy: "How do we support and fund living systems and people who are connected to place? That will transform the world."

We are grateful that the story of philanthropy is not static; it is evolving and improving with every new challenge. With leaders like Hassan, Abokor, and Archie holding the pen and the microphone, we can't wait for the next chapter.

Face Off: Donavon's MS Journey

Hockey is a big deal in Shaunavon, Saskatchewan. The Globe and Mail and CBC have called it a hockey hotbed. Primarily a farming community with a population of 1800, Shaunavon is located an hour's drive from both the Alberta and Montana borders. You will certainly recognize a few of the professional hockey players from the Shaunavon area: Hayley Wickenheiser for one, Braydon Coburn, Kole Lind, Jayden Schwartz, Bryan Trottier, Zach Smith, Dyson Stevenson, Kale Kessy – the list goes on! Many expected Donavon Henrion to join that list. After all, Donavon was playing in the Senior Hockey League at 15 years old, holding his own against players 25 to 35 years old.

"I had scouts coming down to watch me play, letters coming in with invites to Junior [Hockey League] camps, and phone calls from team's [General Managers]. It was overwhelming. That year, 2010 or so, was when my first symptoms of multiple sclerosis (MS) occurred.

Despite the small population, there are many people living with MS in Shaunavon. Donavon had participated in the MS Walk in Eastend, one of the closest communities, for many years in support of his uncle who also lives with MS. Long before his own diagnosis in 2016, Donavon had experienced MS symptoms, he just didn't know it yet.

"My last year of Junior hockey, I couldn't skate backwards. I started questioning myself, thinking, I know I'm better than this. Do I just suck at hockey now? I was tiring out so quickly and was sore all the time. I was taking a lot of over-the-counter painkillers and at one point, the trainer cut me off... During a trip to Mexico, my feet went numb; I had that pins and needles sensation. I could still run so I didn't think much of it. I just played it off as a hockey injury. I was only 21."

When his vision started to fail, an optometrist told him there was nothing wrong. That was the same reply he kept getting at the walk-in clinics.

"It's so frustrating not knowing what is going on with your body and not getting any answers. I turned to alcohol, as well as painkillers. I fell into a depression. The alcohol numbed the pain and made me forget for a while that there was something seriously wrong. I was drinking five times a week and sometimes a case of beer a night. My coordination started to go as well."

Donavon clearly remembers the night that he realized he couldn't keep ignoring the symptoms. He went to skate at an outdoor rink near his house.

"I laced up my skates and stepped on the ice and – BAM – I fell. I kept trying to get up and kept falling. I just sat on the ice and pulled out my phone and called my mom. I told her, 'We need to go get me checked out. I can't skate anymore.' It was a frightening feeling. I was losing control of my body and I didn't know why."

After many troubling symptoms, Donavon secured an appointment for an MRI. In 2016, he was diagnosed with MS. He and his mom discussed treatment options with the medical team at the Saskatoon MS Clinic. It was overwhelming going from zero answers to information overload. The four-hour drive back to Shaunavon was very quiet.

"All my life I had swagger, right? I had been good at sports and all of it was taken away from me. There was no negotiation, just a snap of your fingers and all of it was gone."

As a permanent figure in the Shaunavon and area sports circles, several slow pitch tournaments and hockey camps around his hometown held fundraisers for Donavon to offset travel expenses to get treatments in Saskatoon at the only MS clinic in the province. A pancake breakfast brought out the whole town. When two close friends got married, they insisted he have the boot of money they had collected at their event. Despite the strong community support, the MS treatment he was initially prescribed was not working.

Back in Saskatoon, his doctor recommended a high-efficacy treatment that suppresses the immune system and is typically prescribed for people who have been unresponsive to other MS disease modifying therapies (DMTs).

Borrowed Food Truck Rolls into 7,000 Meals a Week

"When the pandemic struck, there was no food truck at the Mission shelter, which used to serve mostly in the Waller Street dining room. Then came one, on loan."

Our daily bread was once a mere menu thought — now it's a costed worry, maybe an outright prayer.

So it occurs in Tuesday's brilliant sunshine as the Ottawa Mission's No. 2 food truck pulls into a church parking lot on Prince Albert Street in east-end Overbrook. The line is there already — it may be the best meal they get all day, "all week" one woman ventured.

On foot, on bicycles, holding Mom's hand, in a stroller or, like Hélène Choinière, 60, in an electric wheelchair.

"This service is really important for me," she said, clutching a bag with four prepared meals.

"I come because I don't get enough money to supply me with food all month. My neighbour is in a wheelchair too, so I grab a couple for him." So, money is tight? "More than tight." She is also a long-hauler with COVID and, in outings to the grocery store, is distressed at rising prices — up about six to eight per cent overall this year, higher on many items, the biggest spike in about 30 years.

"I don't buy anything that isn't on sale. Even if it's on the list — not on sale, I don't buy it."

She thinks there is a misconception about people who find themselves needing help, like a free meal once a week. "I didn't choose to be on the system. I used to own a house and drive a car. I used to have a good job. I didn't choose to be sick."

When the pandemic struck, there was no food truck at the Mission shelter, which used to serve mostly in the Waller Street dining room. Then came one, on loan, dispensing 500 meals a week to five communities. Now there are two trucks, 31 communities (rotating basis), seven-day service and an astounding output of 7,000 meals a week.

Unlike a food bank, these are hot, prepared meals, ready to eat. Monday was chicken burgers, salad and mashed potatoes; Tuesday was grilled chicken, mixed vegetables and rice.

Mission chef Ric Watson is on the truck today, helping dispense some 200 meals at this location, the Seventh Day Adventist Church, which also has its own monthly food bank and clothing depot. Watson sees the rising cost of food first-hand, as his new stand-alone kitchen on Rideau Street churns out meals by the thousands while it trains new workers.

"It's crazy. It's absolutely insane."

He's usually on a truck at least once a week. "I've been at the Mission for 20 years and I never realized how bad the food insecurity was until the pandemic hit."

The Mission partners with a good number of Ottawa Community Housing sites, but also city-run community houses and food cupboards in lower-income neighbourhoods. Watson says the elderly, especially those isolated, particularly benefit from a delivered hot meal.

So there was George Buchanan, 54, on Monday, picking up a meal for his mother, Susan, 86, who lives at McEwen Terrace, in the west end, by the Sir John A. Macdonald Parkway.

"It's been a godsend. She has days when she can't really get around too much, so stuff like this really helps."

The rising cost of food is a fundamental piece of the "affordability" issue that is gathering like storm clouds in 2022. Ask anyone filling up a gas tank; trying to buy a house; find manageable rent; or buy a chunk of cheese.

The lead statement this week from the head of Ontario's striking carpenters' union was telling: "It comes down to financial compensation. We are having an affordability crisis right now in the province of Ontario, and the cost of living, whether it's groceries and putting food on the table, housing or gasoline to get to work."

(Now imagine living on $1,200 a month of ODSP, not $30 an hour swinging a hammer.)

So does Elizabeth Jones, 50, feel it coming and going. She said she had stable housing above The White Horse Restaurant on Tremblay Road for 10 years but it closed last year to make way for a multi-unit housing project. So, with the move to Overbrook, her rent went from $750 all in (shared) to $1,050 plus (shared).

“Money is always tight,” said the disability pensioner, in the food line Tuesday.

“Usually that last week (of the month) is the roughest.”

Watson, meanwhile, says the need is probably there to support a third truck but Chef Ric’s operation is close to maximum production.

“I always say this has been the silver lining of the pandemic. It opened up our eyes and got us out in the community, to see the need.”

The meals are available to anyone. For a list of scheduled stops: <https://ottawa-mission.com/ottawa-mission-food-truck-weekly-schedule>.

“I didn’t have anything to lose, my MS was progressing faster and faster.”

Donavon found the treatment experience draining. For five days, he took infusions of steroids and then a DMT. The next year he did the same treatment, thankfully only three days of infusions though. He lost 40 pounds.

“After that, my balance improved and I didn’t look drunk when I walked. Between my first and second treatments, my mother was diagnosed with cancer. She went to Saskatoon herself for six weeks to do her treatments, while I was the one who stayed home. It was tough on me ‘cause my mom and I are close, it’s only her and I.”

While he doesn’t pretend it has been easy, Donavon’s resilience is remarkable.

Things have improved since the night he fell at the outdoor rink, through hard work and the community support that continued outside of the arena. Back home in Shaunavon, he helps a farmer during harvest, works out six days a week with a friend who is a personal trainer, and began playing the guitar, which has helped his coordination. He enjoys tinkering with engines from cars to lawnmowers with a family friend. He often score keeps local Minor Hockey games and is always willing assist a hockey or football coach in wrangling players. While he still dreams of skating again, nothing could keep Donavon away from the arena.

“Before the infusions, I was almost at the point of needing a wheelchair. I should’ve been using a cane, but I never once did. I was too stubborn. The results of my last MRI showed my lesions are smaller and not all of them are active. That’s the best news I’ve had in a few years!”

Since his diagnosis, the Saskatchewan Blue Cross MS Walk has taken on more significance for Donavon.

“Before I was just a supporter. No one knows what it is like to live with MS until you live that reality. The MS Walk reminds me that I’m loved and I’m not in this fight alone. It inspires me to never give up.”

SYMBOL OF TRUST

The Imagine Canada Trustmark: Why donating to an accredited charity is giving with confidence

The Standards Program

The Imagine Canada Standards Program is designed to help charities and non-profits strengthen their organizational practices, and build donors' trust and confidence. To earn accreditation and use of the Trustmark, organizations undergo a rigorous peer review process to demonstrate excellence in five fundamental areas: board governance; financial accountability and transparency; fundraising; staff management; and volunteer involvement. The Trustmark - a sought-after hallmark of excellence - demonstrates rigorous standards of performance.

Why give to an accredited organization?

Strong leadership and good governance are the qualities to look for when considering donating to a charity. Here are three reasons why donors have peace of mind when giving to an accredited organization.

1. Confidence

According to Ignite Lab Public Opinion survey, nearly 3 in 4 Canadians would have more confidence in a charity accredited by an independent body. Organizations seeking accreditation must provide evidence to demonstrate compliance for each standard, pass a peer review and complete regular compliance report to show ongoing adherence to the standards, which means their policies and practices have been vetted by multiple independent professionals.

2. Transparency

The Trustmark demonstrates the highest possible commitment to transparency. One of the Standards Program's goals is to help charities become more open, notably by encouraging them to implement best practices which promote accessible and regular communications, including releasing financial statements and reporting on the impact of donations.

3. Review & Leadership

Accredited organizations have demonstrated that their board and leaders are committed to excellence. The Trustmark signifies these organizations have met a rigorous set of standards across all levels of the organization and are investing in continuously improving organizational practices.

Choose an accredited organization

The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic will be felt by charities for years to come. Now more than ever, organizations are relying on donors' generosity to continue their mission. When choosing a charity to donate to, consider giving to an organization that has invested in trust.

Over 250 organizations from coast to coast, big and small, and devoted to a diverse range of worthy causes in communities at home and around the globe have earned accreditation by demonstrating organizational excellence. Visit www.imaginecanada.ca to view the list of accredited organizations.

The Standards Program gratefully acknowledges the generous financial contributions from founding and presenting sponsor Canada Life; and generous funding from the Lawson Foundation.

SYMBOLE DE CONFIANCE

Le sceau de confiance d'Imagine Canada : Pourquoi donner à un organisme caritatif agréé, c'est donner en toute confiance

Le Programme de normes

Le Programme de normes d'Imagine Canada vise à aider les organismes de bienfaisance et sans but lucratif à renforcer leurs pratiques organisationnelles et à inspirer confiance aux donateurs. Pour obtenir leur agrément et utiliser le sceau de confiance, les organismes se soumettent à un processus d'examen rigoureux par les pairs pour démontrer leur excellence dans cinq domaines fondamentaux : gouvernance du conseil d'administration; responsabilité financière et transparence; collecte de fonds; gestion du personnel et participation des bénévoles. Le sceau – une marque d'excellence recherchée – atteste la conformité à des normes de rendement rigoureuses.

Pourquoi donner à un organisme agréé?

Un solide leadership et une saine gouvernance sont les qualités à rechercher quand on envisage de faire un don à un organisme caritatif. Voici les trois raisons pour lesquelles ceux qui donnent à un organisme agréé le font en toute tranquillité d'esprit.

1. Confiance

Selon un sondage d'opinion publique réalisé par Ignite Lab Public, près de trois Canadiens sur quatre feraient plus confiance à un organisme caritatif agréé par une entité indépendante. Les organismes qui sollicitent l'agrément doivent prouver leur conformité à chacune des normes, réussir un examen par les pairs et présenter périodiquement un rapport de conformité pour démontrer qu'ils continuent de se conformer aux normes. Leurs politiques et leurs pratiques sont donc approuvées par de multiples professionnels indépendants.

2. Transparence

Le sceau de confiance démontre le plus haut niveau d'engagement possible envers la transparence. Le Programme de normes a pour but, entre autres, d'aider les organismes caritatifs dans leur quête de transparence en les encourageant à mettre en œuvre des pratiques exemplaires pour assurer des communications accessibles et régulières, dont la publication de leurs états financiers et de rapports sur les retombées des dons.

Examen et leadership

Les organismes agréés ont démontré l'engagement de leur conseil d'administration et de leurs dirigeants envers l'excellence. Le sceau de confiance atteste que ces organismes respectent un ensemble de normes rigoureuses à tous les niveaux de leur organisation et qu'ils investissent dans l'amélioration continue de leurs pratiques opérationnelles.

Choisir un organisme agréé

La pandémie de COVID-19 aura des répercussions sur les organismes caritatifs pendant de nombreuses années. Aujourd'hui plus que jamais, les organismes comptent sur la générosité des donateurs pour poursuivre leur mission. Au moment de choisir un organisme caritatif auquel faire un don, envisagez un organisme qui a investi dans la confiance.

Près de 250 organismes caritatifs canadiens d'un océan à l'autre, grands et petits, dévoués à un éventail de causes louables au sein des collectivités du Canada et du reste du monde, ont investi dans un leadership responsable et mérité leur agrément en apportant la preuve de leur excellence organisationnelle. Consultez la liste des organismes agréés à www.imaginecanada.ca.

Le Programme de normes est reconnaissant des généreuses contributions financières de Canada Vie, son commanditaire fondateur et principal, et du généreux soutien financier de la Lawson Foundation.

But: Fondée en 1918, l'Association des Amputés de guerre offre des programmes en constante évolution. D'abord vouée aux anciens combattants amputés, elle aide aujourd'hui l'ensemble des personnes amputées, y compris les enfants. En faisant un don testamentaire, vous perpétuez l'œuvre des amputés de guerre et financez nos programmes essentiels destinés aux personnes amputées au Canada, notamment le Programme LES VAINQUEURS qui procure aux enfants amputés une aide diversifiée, entre autres pour leurs membres artificiels, afin qu'ils puissent mener une vie active et autonome. Grâce à votre appui, les programmes de l'association poursuivront leur essor. L'organisme ne reçoit aucune subvention gouvernementale.

Give to a better future

Your bequest today can change someone else's tomorrow

When someone loses their sight, their life can change in many ways. They may have to give up their job or turn over their driver's license. They'll have to learn to adapt to doing everyday tasks without the help of sight. And they'll need to come to terms with the emotional challenges of sight loss as sunshine, colours, and the faces of their loved ones begin to fade from view. You can help.

By making a gift in your will to the CNIB Foundation, you'll ensure people in your community have the support they need to move forward with confidence after losing their sight, and continue to live the lives they choose.

Call Cindi Meyer, Director of Planned Giving, at 1-800-563-2642 (ext. 7470) or email cindi.meyer@cnib.ca to learn more about creating a gift in your will.

40 Years of Life-Changing Care

When Covenant House Toronto opened its doors in 1982 we offered 30 beds to young people. Over the past 40 years, we have evolved our services along with the changing needs of young people, always maintaining our dedication to improving the lives of vulnerable youth. More than a place to stay, we provide life-changing care with unconditional love and respect. We offer housing options, health and well-being support, training and skill development and ongoing care once youth move into the community. To date, we have supported over 100,000 youth experiencing homelessness and trafficking through our life-changing care.

As we celebrate our 40th anniversary and reflect on how far we've come, we also look to the future and reaffirm our commitment to helping youth achieve brighter futures.

A gift in your Will ensures we can continue helping youth who are homeless, trafficked or at risk ignite their potential and reclaim their lives.

of canada

You can help give a lifetime of sanctuary.

Donkeys are the ‘forgotten equine’ – gentle animals who serve quietly and are too often mistreated or abandoned. Your legacy can give them the forever home and care they deserve. To make a bequest, please call 519.836.1697 or email info@thedonkeysanctuary.ca.

They help families plan for their futures, providing expert level guidance when it comes to making significant life decisions. Clients turn to STEP members for direction following the death of a partner; ensuring elderly and vulnerable relatives are cared for; safely passing a family business from one generation to the next; and helping clients to support charitable causes in an effective way.

OVER 8 MILLION CANADIANS ARE AT RISK OF GOING BLIND AND THERE ARE NO CURES... YET.

Blindness can affect anyone — infants, children, adults — and it is life limiting. Imagine the struggles of those coping with school or trying to get a job. People living with vision loss just want to see the world like everyone else.

BUT THERE IS HOPE.

Fighting Blindness Canada (FBC) is the only Canadian charity solely dedicated to research for inherited eye diseases, and others like glaucoma and age-related macular degeneration (AMD). To date, we have invested over $40 million dollars to understand, preserve and restore sight.

Thanks to donors like you, Fighting Blindness Canada is able to fund internationally renowned vision researchers who are developing new treatments and cures for blinding eye diseases. Every dollar you give brings us closer to ending blindness.

You can help restore sight through a gift in your will. Please contact Ann Morrison, 1.800.461.3331, ext. 232 or amorrison@fightingblindness.ca

But: La Fondation INCA qui a fêté ses 100 ans d'existence en 2018 est un organisme sans but lucratif qui vise à changer ce que cela veut dire que d'être aveugle. Nous fournissons des programmes innovateurs et des initiatives de défense des droits qui amènent les personnes touchées par la cécité à réaliser leurs rêves en éliminant les barrières pour favoriser l'inclusion. Notre action est alimentée par un réseau de bénévoles, de donateurs et de partenaires d'un océan à l'autre. Pour en savoir plus ou pour participer, visitez le site inca.ca.

Donnez pour un avenir meilleur

Votre legs aujourd'hui peut changer l'avenir de quelqu'un d'autre demain.

Lorsqu'une personne perd la vue, sa vie peut changer à bien des égards. Elle peut être obligée d'abandonner son emploi ou de rendre son permis de conduire. Elle devra apprendre à s'adapter aux tâches quotidiennes sans l'aide de la vue. Et elle devra faire face aux défis émotionnels de la perte de vision, alors que le soleil, les couleurs et les visages de ses proches commencent à disparaître. Vous pouvez aider.

En faisant un don par testament à la Fondation INCA, vous vous assurez que les personnes de votre collectivité bénéficient du soutien dont elles ont besoin pour aller de l'avant avec confiance après avoir perdu la vue et continuer à vivre la vie qu'elles ont choisie.

Appelez Cindi Meyer, directrice des Dons planifiés, au 1 800 563-2642 (poste 7470) ou envoyez un courriel à cindi.meyer@inca.ca pour en savoir plus sur la façon de créer un don dans votre testament.

UN LEGS QUI A DU SENS

Les hommes, femmes et enfants qui ont été contraints de quitter leur foyer ont déployé des efforts extraordinaires pour survivre. Tant qu'il y aura des personnes déracinées dans le monde, le HCR, l'Agence des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés, continuera à répondre à l'appel pour apporter son soutien aux millions de réfugiés, de personnes déplacées de force et d'apatrides, que ce soit aujourd'hui, demain ou dans les années à venir.

Avec un don testamentaire en faveur du HCR, votre générosité peut permettre de fournir des services et des biens essentiels à celles et ceux qui en ont besoin de toute urgence, quel que soit l'endroit où se produit une crise.

Contactez Kudzai Riva, Directrice des dons planifiés, à rivak@unhcr.org ou au 416 926-7974 pour en savoir plus sur l'incidence des dons par testament.

But: Mercy Ships Canada a réfléchi à la question de l'héritage et investit dans l'avenir des soins de santé. Depuis plus de 40 ans, Mercy Ships apporte l'espoir et la guérison à celles et ceux qui en ont le plus besoin. Mercy Ships utilise des navires-hôpitaux ultramodernes dirigés par des bénévoles qualifiés pour fournir des soins de santé gratuits dans les pays en développement. Le plus grand navire-hôpital civil au monde est en cours de préparation pour être livré à Mercy Ships. L'ajout du Global Mercy à la flotte de Mercy Ships fait plus que doubler notre capacité à renforcer les systèmes de santé dans les pays en développement et à avoir un impact durable.

REGIONAL ANIMAL PROTECTION SOCIETY

LET YOUR VALUES LIVE ON...

Your bequest can save and improve the lives of thousands of animals for many years to come.

The Regional Animal Protection Society, a no-kill organization, operates Canada's largest cat sanctuary, home to hundreds of unadoptable residents who would have faced euthanasia elsewhere.

CatSanctuary.ca

Thank you.

rapsbc.com/planned-giving

We are constructing Canada's most advanced dog sanctuary, to socialize and rehabilitate dogs facing euthanasia, so that they can find their forever families – no matter how long it takes.

Purpose: St. Boniface Hospital Foundation supports excellence in patient care and medical research at St. Boniface Hospital. Lives have been saved, can be saved, and will be saved, thanks to our donors. The Hospital was Western Canada's first, with a legacy of more than 150 years as a pioneer in research and patient care. Manitoba's first cardiac surgery in 1959, developing Canada's first in-hospital palliative care program in 1974, and the country's first free-standing research facility in 1987 are just a few of our milestones. By joining our community of donors you become a lifeline for the tens of thousands of patients who depend on St. Boniface Hospital each year.

CREATE A LASTING LEGACY

Men, women and children forced to flee their homes have made extraordinary efforts to survive. For as long as people are displaced, UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, will continue to answer the call to support millions of refugees, forcibly displaced communities and stateless people—today, tomorrow and for years to come.

A gift in your Will to UNHCR means your generosity can provide vital services and supplies to those who need it urgently, wherever an emergency strikes.

Contact Kudzai Riva, Director of Planned Giving, at rivak@unhcr.org or (416) 926-7974 to learn more about the impact of leaving a gift in your Will.

Purpose: Since its founding in 1918, The War Amps programs have grown from assisting war amputees – whom we still serve – to all amputees, including children. A charitable estate donation in your will honours the legacy of war amputees and funds our essential programs for all amputees across Canada, including CHAMP for child amputees. CHAMP provides comprehensive support, including financial assistance for artificial limbs, to allow children to lead independent and active lives. With your help, our vital programs will carry on long into the future. The War Amps does not receive government grants.

Ecological Gifts:

A Legacy for Tomorrow, a Tax Break Today

Do you own land that contains natural habitat, such as a forest, prairie, wetland or shoreline? Would you like to see it protected for future generations?

Through the Government of Canada's Ecological Gifts Program, landowners can donate their land, or a partial interest, to an eligible recipient organisation that will care for it forever, such as a land trust, environmental charity, or government.

In addition to peace of mind, donors can receive significant income tax benefits, including elimination of any tax on the capital gain.

For more information, visit the Ecological Gifts Program website at www.canada.ca/ecological-gifts or call 1-800-668-6767.

Les dons écologiques :

un don pour l'avenir, des avantages fiscaux aujourd'hui

Possédez-vous une terre comprenant des habitats naturels comme des forêts, des prairies, des milieux humides ou côtiers? Aimeriez-vous qu'elle soit protégée pour les générations à venir?

Le Programme des dons écologiques du gouvernement du Canada permet aux propriétaires fonciers de faire don de leur propriété, ou d'un intérêt partiel, à un bénéficiaire admissible qui en prendra soin à perpétuité, comme une fiducie foncière, un organisme de bienfaisance environnemental ou un gouvernement.

En plus de la tranquillité d'esprit, les donateurs peuvent bénéficier d'avantages fiscaux importants, y compris l'élimination de l'impôt sur le gain en capital.

Pour plus d'information, visitez le site du Programme des dons écologiques à www.canada.ca/dons-ecologiques ou appelez au 1-800-668-6767.

The Circle on Philanthropy (The Circle) works to transform philanthropy and contribute to positive change between Philanthropy and Indigenous communities by creating spaces of learning, innovation, relationship-building, co-creation, and activation.

The Circle works alongside Indigenous-led organizations, Indigenous informed organizations, organizations with Indigenous beneficiaries, our members and philanthropic signatories of The Declaration of Action to encourage settler-philanthropic organizations to learn, acknowledge, and understand more about reconciliation and the decolonization of wealth. The Circle's work aims to transform the settler philanthropic sector in a reorientation toward equity and justice.

Indigenous-led, philanthropic adjacent and with an all-female team, The Circle is transforming the philanthropic landscape by asking good questions, building community, and inviting wholeness, all while centering accountability.
